THE MORMONS

AND THE SUGAR DEAL

It looks as though the country were at last to get the facts in regard to the alliance between the Mormon church and the republican party—at least the high tariff wing thereof. It has been charged that the Mormon vote in several of the western states was delivered to the republican candidates in return for legislation protecting sugar, this charge having recently been made by an ex-Mormon. It is known, of course, in a general way, that there was a politico-religious "combine." Now, it is to be hoped we are to get the details, and from Joseph F. Smith, head of the Mormon church, who is to testify next week before the house committee that is investigating the sugar trust. In his testimony yesterday, Lowell M. Palmer, director of the American Sugar Refining company, had something to say on this subject. The trust sent a man out to Utah to "round up" the beet sugar people. John Christopher Cutler was the man dealt with. As a result of his trip to the east the first purchase was made. "I was in favor," said Mr. Palmer, "of purchasing from the Mormons first, because I thought the Mormons could control their people." When asked whether Cutler was not "a bishop, or something in the Mormon church," Palmer said: "I don't know. We dealt with Mr. Cutler, and he was a very nice man." This man Cutler is president of a woolen company, incorporated under the name of Cutler Bros. Company, and a director of the Utah-Idaho Sugar company, and a member of its executive committee. He has been clerk of Salt Lake county, and governor of the state. Also he is a republican and a member of the Mormon church. These facts are very interesting. That Cutler is interested both in Mormonism and in sugar is, of course, obvious. No doubt he is also interested in wool, and is opposed to the democratic wool bill. It was with this man that the sugar trust dealt. The country will be glad to hear from Cutler, and particularly glad to hear from Joseph F. Smith. The politico-religious-business situa-

Kappa Kappa Kappa—Miss Pansy Bell.

Mrs. Alex White of West Ossian, assisted by her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Sutton, of Decatur, gave a 6 o'clock dinner in honor of her niece, Miss Lotta Summers. The afternoon was delightfully spent in conversation and needlework. The table was decorated with ferns and a dainty basket of bride's roses with red roses for each of the guests. To one of these red roses was attached a card bearing the announcement of the approaching marriage of Miss Lotta Summers, on the twenty-eighth of June, to Mr. Roscoe Foland, of Noblesville, and after it was read, congratulations immediately followed. After this an elaborate three-course dinner was served. Miss Summers is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Summers of this place and is a lady possessing an exceedingly large circle of friends. Mr. Foland is a promising young lawyer in his native city. Those present to enjoy Mrs. White's hospitality were the Misses Lotta Summers, Hattie Lipkey, Laura Kreigh, Blanche Wilson, Ida Kreigh, Katharine Baker, Augusta Deam, May Weaver, May Morton, Inez Gorrell, Linnie Meeks and Lulu Summers.—Ossian News. Unusually delightful was the penny social given by the United Brethren ladies at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. I. Imbler on Ninth street, a large attendance being present. Music was rendered by Mrs. Harry Imbler and Miss Gayle Nelson and others, and the luncheon provided by the ladies was bounteous and delicious, served buffet style, each item of the menu costing a penny. A large sum was realized for the society's treasury.

ANOTHER FIGHT

Standpatters and Insurgents to Scrap Over Presidential Politics.

TAFT AND ANTI-TAFT

The Friends of Beveridge Framing Up Against the President.

Indianapolis Ind., June 17.—(Special to Daily Democrat)—Presidential politics is widening the breach between the two factions of the republican party in Indiana. It now seems that by the time the campaign of 1912 is on, the two factions will be known as "Taft" and "Anti-Taft." The standpatters will be found in the organization supporting the president's aspirations to succeed himself and Albert Jeremiah Beveridge, with his insurgent forces, will attempt to bring about the election of delegates opposed to Taft. With no other purpose in view than that of getting revenge, it is said that the Beveridge faithful will fight the president to the last ditch in the republican national convention—provided the Beveridge men get a look-in when that body meets. The insurgents of Indiana are planning to start a Roosevelt-for-president movement with the hope of obtaining delegates upon the waning popularity of the lion-hunting president. Once Beveridge gets control of a handful of Indiana delegates, it is predicted he will throw his support in the national convention to Senator LaFollette. These well-laid plans of the insurgent forces of this state are, of course, no more than just plans. As a matter of fact political prophets here expect the reactionaries, with the force of the federal machine behind them, to gain control of the state organization. The best organizers of the party are known to be with the standpatters and they are already laying their lines to get control of affairs. While the Beveridge state committee has been recovering from the shock received in the last election, the standpatters, who so obligingly kept in the background on that memorable occasion, have been at work. The Fairbanks-Hemenway-Durbin men point warningly to the result of the "didos" cut by the Beveridgeites in the last campaign. Few of the republicans seem hopeful of success in the next election and most of their plans are apparently to gain control of the organization. Meanwhile, State Chairman Edwin Lee, who previous to the last campaign, was unknown to state politics, sits on the lid of the state committee. Lee is still chairman, and he refuses to subside, even though the campaign is many months past. Of late he has been touring the state playing the role of the dove of peace but it is understood that his mission was singularly unsuccessful. Although an attempt has been made recently to give out the impression that Lee is not worshipping at the shrine of Beveridge as of yore, the very fact that he is still clinging tenaciously to the chairmanship disproves the report. There can be but one interpretation of Lee's action and that is an attempt by Beveridge to maintain control of the state organization by the very simple method of not letting go of it.

The recent meeting of the republican members of the last legislature, for the purpose of promoting harmony, caused a broad smile here. The leaders of both parties are still smiling at the presumption of the solons, who succeeded in making a general mess of things during the last legislature. There were few real leaders among the legislators and when once the radical insurgents, standpatters and statewide prohibitionists got into action, the meeting resembled more a curbstone dog-fight than a harmony fest. The republicans seem to be suffering from a lack of issues for the coming campaign. They started off with a whoop on the proposed new constitution and were doing fairly well when they stuck the party's foot down its throat by starting a suit to determine the validity of the method by which the proposed constitution is being submitted to the people. As matters stand now, the new constitution will either receive the endorsement of the supreme court or be thrown entirely out of the campaign by that judicial body. In either case the republicans lose their thunder. Although the republicans do not admit it, their chief opposition to the proposed new constitution is known to be based upon the fact that it would prevent the illegal voting of foreigners. In the past the "Grand Old Party" has been accustomed to reckon with the "hinky" vote as one of its regular assets.
