The threshing of the largest crop of oats in this vicinity was completed this morning by the Isch brothers at their farm near the Wells-Adams county line. From 280 acres the men secured 14,500 bushels of oats or about fifty-two bushels to the acre. The oats crop is probably one of the largest in the state of Indiana and the yield is a record breaker. The five Isch brothers, who assisted in the threshing were more than pleased with the results of their labor. The brothers have 325 acres of the 700-acre farm in corn and it is reported to be the finest in many years. The rain and windstorm a few days ago blew much of it down and it was then thought it would cause a loss. It is doing fine now, however, and the rains of the past week have helped it greatly. The Isch brothers, who own the farm, are Earnest, Fred, Albert, John and Joe.—Bluffton News.
