To hear some of the anti-democrats talk, one would think, if he didn't know better that there would be no trouble in the republicans, progressives and democrats sleeping together in one political bed. If the fur don't fly long before this campaign is over, we will miss our guess.

The Ossian Journal is the name of the newest paper on our exchange table, volume one, number one, having reached us today. It is a bright and newsy ten-page weekly, with B. J. Sprunger as editor. If the succeeding copies keep up the standard fixed by the first number, it will be a winner.

The Berne convention came about as near being a "fizzle" as could be imagined. After weeks of constant labor by two or three imaginary politicians, assisted by the wise republican "bosses," anxious to split the democratic party, after predicting a crowd of two thousand, and a meeting that would rival a state convention, today's affair at Berne was almost pitiful. By actual count there were 250, including the band in the parade, and it took a half-hour band concert to get that bunch together. Four-fifths of the number were never democrats. The big advance delegation which it was advertised in the Herald would go from here yesterday to arrange for the big meeting consisted in reality of Morton Stults and Milton Miller. It begins to look as though a lot of good wind had been wasted.

The fact that Secretary Bryan's peace plans are meeting such hearty response from nations generally, indicates that the chief business of an army will soon be that of keeping up appearances. The plan is simple at that. It simply proposes that, when any nation believes it has been injured by another, no steps shall be taken in the matter until an international commission has investigated the issues. In other words, it is the old adage, "When angry, count a hundred," applied to nations. Of the forty-two countries to whom the proposal was made, thirty-two have signified their willingness to adopt the scheme. A dozen treaties have been made, embodying the idea. For putting into practical operation this one simple idea of international good sense, Mr.

danger of falling into the hands of the federalists according to the code telegram that escaped the censor at Chihuahua and reached here today. So serious is the situation that General Villa and staff are hastening to the front. Villa has concentrated his provisions and ammunition at Escalon. A million rounds of ammunition and food for a long campaign are there. News of the attack on Escalon was greatly surprising as no one knew that the federalists were so far north.

Chicago, March 17.—(Special to the Daily Democrat.)—Suffrage workers tramped all over the city today in weather that hinted at pneumonia in their final effort to swell the registration of women voters on the last registration day, before the city election. Leaders predicted that 65,000 women would register before nightfall.

of the miraculous in it. And yet there is no question as to its absolute truth. The race to whom he brought the message of salvation has spread itself all over the earth, and so made his glory co-extensive with their own wide ramification. Hence St. Patrick is today rightfully to be regarded as a world saint, without any limit or bound to his tutelary honor and influence.

Daniel Donovan, a true son of Erin left this morning for Fort Wayne where he will attend the annual celebration of St. Patrick's day.

"FOR THE HEART OF A PRINCESS" AT LYRIC TODAY

An amazing tale of the Arabian Nights, presented in all its oriental splendor and riches, is "For the Heart of a Princess," which will be the attraction at the Lyric today. It is an enthralling story of the mysterious orient, perfectly produced with all-star cast in scenes of fairyland beauty. At the mysteries and beauty of the orient have been woven into this remarkable three part production which is characterized by the superb acting of a notable cast. Miss Elsie Albert, as the princess, handles her part with all the skill of a finished actress. It is not too much to assert that the settings and costumes of this production are the most elaborate ever used in a motion picture. No Arabian Nights' tale that you might have read as a child ever contained such thrills as this surpassingly beautiful production. Set in outdoor fairyland, alive with picturesque characters—Ethiopian slaves and women of the orient—the story glides quickly through climax after climax. It is a picture that every member of the family will enjoy and talk about for days to come. The admission will be five cents. The picture for tomorrow afternoon and evening will be Joe Welch, the world's greatest Hebrew impersonator in "The Struggle for Wealth." It is an appalling story of a poor emigrant's struggles for the comforts of life. It is full of spirited action and big exciting scenes and is well worth while. The prices for this remarkable feature will be five cents.

The desperate woman drags the young equestrienne, who narrowly escapes a fiery death. The wicked plot fails and love is victorious. "Conditions will be found as rotten here as at Terre Haute," Sapperfield said. He also said that he would issue a subpoena for the heads of all four parties to appear before the grand jury and that the probe would be thorough.

(United Press Service)
Detroit, Mich., Mar. 17.—(Special to Daily Democrat.)—With Lyman G. Burnett, proprietor of a horse market in Ft. Wayne, at liberty on bail, the local police will work on the theory that his infatuation for a Fort Wayne woman caused him to make an alleged overdraft for $36,000 on a local bank.
