A healthy, clean and enjoyable sport is the game of bowls, played a thousand years ago on the greenwards of Great Britain, and again coming into popularity in American. Bowls is an outdoor game, played on a smoothly rolled turf, perfectly level, about 40 yd. long and preferably square, and affords excellent exercise. Bowling greens have been established by many clubs as well as in the parks of Buffalo and other eastern cities, and the South Park Commissioners of Chicago propose to establish a green in Washington Park in that city next year. The game is described, with illustration, in the June Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Ed Smith and Marshal Henry Fritz of Bluffton put in Saturday afternoon and evening hunting for a dark flea-bitten grey mare, which disappeared from the Smith draying company's barn Friday night. Surrounding towns were notified by telephone as Mr. Smith thought that the animal might have been stolen. The animal was located Sunday morning by Mr. Smith when he went to the Six Mile church to inquire if members of the congregation had seen his horse. The animal was found at the home of a farmer named Myers, seven miles east of town, who had taken her up. She had broken her halter and as she originally came from near Decatur it is supposed that she had started back to her old home.

In the June American Magazine appears an article entitled "A Modern Opium Eater," written by a newspaper man, who became a victim of the habit and is now a convict in a penitentiary. In the course of the article the author quotes as follows, what a Chinese den-keeper said to him about the power of the habit to hold its victims: "You no quit. Every man all-time say he quit. Every man all-time say he quit. One time, smoke two time, smoke three time, then smoke all-time. Chinaman, white man, chokquay (negro) 'all-time same. No can quit. Bimeby you die you quit. Bimeby maybe you bloke,—no more fiend hollow money, no can steal money, maybe you quit one day, two days. Bimeby maybe you go jail, no get fiend bling you hop, no got money givem policeman catchem hop, you quit. You got money, no go jail, you no quit. I heap sabe. Bimeby you see."

In the fashion department of the June Woman's Home Companion appears an article entitled "Clothes for the Tiny Girl and Boy," in the course of which the author writes in part, as follows, about the changes in babies' clothes within the past fifty years. "Times have changed since the days when the regulation baby dress was the Mother Hubbard model, gathered straight widths on a square or round yoke. The styles for the little children of to-day change with each succeeding season with as much versatility as for the grown-ups. Back in the early sixties, babies wore clothes almost counterparts of their parents'. The infants frock was cut panel front with insets of lace puffing or embroidery. The tiny shoulders, neck and arms were often left bare, the shoulder straps with small puff sleeves falling off the shoulders. Quantities of petticoats suggested the hoop skirts then in vogue. That the first consideration for the baby should be his comfort we all agree, so the simply made garments are the most successful. The materials should be as fine as can be afforded.

When the new "Texas" sailed from Hampton Roads on her first trip in commission recently she was the most powerful battleship flying the Stars and Stripes. Ten 14-in. rifles form her main armament, and twenty-five 5-in. rifles comprise the secondary battery, and the big guns send a 1,400-lb. shell over 12 miles, with a penetration at 5½ miles of 16-in. of Krupp armor. The guns are so arranged in electrically controlled turrets that the ten 14-in. guns may be fired simultaneously. The "Texas" is of 27,000 tons displacement, 573 ft. long and 95 ft. beam. The June Popular Mechanics Magazine contains a page view of the "Texas."

In the June Woman's Home Companion a contributor, who has had long experience as a singing pupil and opera singer in Europe, writes an article entitled "To the Girl Who Wants to Sing," in which he shows why so many girls fail, who is to blame, what kind of talent is needed, and where to study to win success. Following is an extract: "On the subject I can speak very feelingly, for my own career just escaped utter failure when I faced realization which no singer, no matter how talented, can escape; I mean the realization that the master can do only ten per cent. of the work. The pupil must do ninety per cent. There are no good masters, there are only good pupils."

The vanguard of the hosts of mosquitoes has arrived in the city. It is expected the main army will be along soon now. The vanguard seem to be thin and weak and lacking confidence, for they make no vicious attacks and apparently seem content to alight upon coat sleeves where, if they are not swatted, they rest up for a bit, then fly away. Perhaps the fact that summer appetites are yet dull has something to do with the mild manners of the mosquito vanguard. It is still early yet for people to sit around on the grass during the evening, the men with their coats off and shirtsleeves rolled up, women ditto and further encouraging the mosquitoes by wearing peekaboo hosiery and shirtwaists. Or perhaps the mosquito vanguard is composed entirely of men-folk. The masculine of the species is not deadly, according to a bulletin just issued by the lofty browed scientists of the University of Wisconsin. The bulletin says that the male feeds on juices of fruits and plants, and lets it go at that, but the female of the species "gorges herself with blood that her eggs have abundant nourishment."
