THE BETTER DAY:

Senator Shively in discussing the improvement of industrial conditions and the outlook for prosperous times holds that the upheaval abroad, the bumper crops here at home, the extensions contemplated by the railroads indicate an epoch of prosperity exceeding any ever known here.

Signs are as clear as day that commerce and industry are looking up, says the Logansport Pharos. Conditions are everywhere improving. America is recovering from the first shock of the war abroad. Trade courses are reopening and credit facilities becoming re-established.

Congress has adjourned after a session, record-breaking both as to length and amount of correctional legislation. Business has accepted the new conditions thus established, in most parts gladly and in all parts without fear. There is no feeling of panic, but only one of hopeful forward looking.

Business, no less than the average citizen, has supreme trust in Woodrow Wilson. Both know he understands their problems and would set his seal to no measure that would jeopardize their common interests.

Under his leadership congress has not run amuck. His continued leadership they fully realize, will mean continued governmental attention to the welfare of all.—Hartford City News.

LOOK AT THIS BUNCH:

Boise Penrose, the malodorous boss of Pennsylvania, was re-elected senator on last Tuesday.

Uncle Joe Cannon, the prince of standpatters, and founder of Cannonism, was elected to congress from Illinois. So was McKinley, another standpatter.

Sereno Payne, author of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill that split the republican party wide open, was elected to congress from New York.

Foraker's man was elected senator from Ohio, and Nick Longworth was returned to congress.

In Indiana Jim Watson, Jim Hemmenway and Fairbanks are seated firmly in the republican saddle, an offense to every progressive voter in the state.

The people of this country do not want these men in control of the nation, and if they think that last Tuesday's election is a vindication of them and their policies, they will have something coming to them two years hence.—New Castle Times.

Figures on the recent election show that if it had been a presidential contest, the democratic nominee would have been chosen by 100 majority in the electoral college, that party having the vote that would give 307 electors. Not such a bad result after all.

ton, Indiana, has sent a message to the state board which says: "Fourteen counties affected with the foot and mouth disease. Situation grave. Ninety-two counties affected with human tuberculosis. Situation serene. Nation and state value cows at sixty dollars each. What is the value of a human baby?" It ought to make us all think a little and it ought to make those who have the power to reduce the terrible loss in this state from tuberculosis. The foot and mouth disease will cost many thousands of dollars before it is stamped out but Dr. Keene of Indianapolis says it will cost the state three dollars as a result of tuberculosis this year for every one spent for the stock disease.

Dr. Hurty of the state board of health recently visited Goshen and in a column article which he sent out after returning to his office praised that city for cleanliness, hospitality, pretty homes and progressive spirit, but criticizes the city because he saw a drunken man and woman followed by a crowd of boys and girls who were laughing and making fun of them. The finds fault with the police, and says the sewerage system could be improved. The doctor says it is his duty to scold and find fault, but we venture that he found conditions in Goshen greatly improved in every way over what they were a few years ago, and the same is true of every city in Indiana.

count of the absence of several who attended the county Sunday school convention held at Berne at that time. The class has been holding its meetings on the first Wednesday afternoon of each month, but has decided to meet in the evenings during the winter months. In the absence of the president the meeting was led by the vice president, Miss Bertha Barone, and consisted of songs, scripture reading and prayer. After the roll call and the payment of monthly dues, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. A few important bills were presented and allowed, including the next year's subscription of class literature. A literary program was rendered, consisting of a select reading and declamations. Then came a delightful social hour, with delicious refreshments, and a few suggestions were introduced for the December meeting. The company consisted of the home family, the class, including the teacher and a few invited guests, among them being Miss Nellie Lett of the Bobo M. E. Sunday school. —Contributed.

NONE IN COUNTY

There have been no shipments of stock into this locality. However, we shall be able to keep up the watch and if there should be any, will take immediate and stringent action to prevent its spread. Every one should do this here and elsewhere that the disease may be stamped out that much quicker.

It is believed that several cattle are infected with the disease in Allen county according to reports from there, but this section of the state so far seems free from the dreaded disease.

LEISURE APPEALS TO FEW

Fine Art of Simple Living Appears to Have Died Out in This Age of Work and Rush.

Leisure of life has disappeared because a great deal of money must be made in order to live. Who today will sacrifice much for good books or a garden or for leisure itself, unaccompanied by luxuries? After all, if one wants to acquire the fine art of simple living, it is the spirit that counts. "I never," said an old gentlewoman who had suffered reverses, "gave up having candle-shades on the table, even if the dinner was only bread and milk." And there is a great deal in the spirit that this triumphant point of view expresses. Like the Emperor Caligula, the old lady had lived as simple a life as she could in the station to which the gods had called her.

To the best of us the practice of the fine art of simple living consists in doing without things gracefully, gaining what we can of pleasant leisure, and giving what we can of cheerful companionship, and in never talking about economy. There are men who would rather die than swear in the presence of ladies, yet boast loudly of their savings in the matter of cigars; and there are women who would forego their annual spring cleaning rather than show their ankles yet who triumphantly tell you after dinner that you have eaten not sweetbreads at their table, but the frugal calves' brains.

These people do not know that one of the principal secrets of the fine art of simple living is never to tell. To save and to tell is as bad as to kiss and to tell, and in the matter of cigars it is only too easy to find out the truth for oneself. Now, Caligula—but whenever he is, this remarkable man must be pleased to know that he has pointed a moral.—Century Magazine.

OBJECTS TO WOMEN WEEPING

Writer Has No Use for Old Saying Which Declares It to Be One of Nature's Laws.

Men hate a weepy woman, and you can't blame them for hating her, writes Mary M. Maxwell. The thing for which they are to blame is that they have not discouraged weeping by making it well known that they are reasonable and reasoning beings and that they take it for granted that their wives are also of this order. Of all the quotations that make me angry I think that one which declares that "men must work and women must weep" affects my temper most. Why must women weep, I should like to know? Once let an engaged man give his fiancee to understand that weeping does not appeal to him; once let a husband explain to his wife that weeping not only calls out the very devil in him, but makes her look a positive fright—leading her gently to a mirror and showing her weeping self up in all its sickening ugliness, and we should get rid of a good many tears; rather, we should not get rid of them, but prevent their showing themselves.

Men have for many thousands of years been telling women it is their part to weep, and until recently women have not known any better than to believe them. Men have told women a great many other foolish things which have been destructive to friendship between husbands and wives. Men have given women to understand that they (women in general) are natural invalids. Women are no more natural invalids than are men, but if you keep telling a woman she is an invalid, that she is "frail," you can make her believe it against her own inward knowledge that she is as sound as a bell.

Where Christianity is Death. Not only are all Christians rigidly barred from Afghanistan, but any native becoming converted to Christianity is instantly punished by death. Not long ago the present Amir summoned the services of a European specialist for treatment of a dangerous abscess with which he was afflicted. The service rendered was so successful that his majesty arranged with the government of India for a permanent European medical specialist at his capital, says a consular report. Unfortunately, however, the first patient died on the operating table, and this caused immediate discontinuance of these services. It is a matter of common belief among medical authorities in India that this initial misfortune was due to an overdose of chloroform, deliberately administered to the patient by an assistant who wished to destroy the influence of the new Christian practitioner.

Electric Range Operated Cheaply.

An electric range displayed recently in the windows of the electric light company at Salt Lake City was operated continuously, both day and night, for a week, at a total cost of $1.18. This figure was based on energy at four cents a kilowatt hour, with a discount of ten per cent. The stove contained one oven, the temperature of which was automatically controlled by a thermostatic device.—Electrical World.

Utilize Former Waste Material.

An interesting feature of the production of anthracite coal in Pennsylvania is the comparatively recent utilization of the smaller sizes of coal. Since the first washery was constructed in 1890 the total recovery of useful fuel shipped from the waste heaps or culm banks has amounted to 49,329,376 long tons.
