Boost Decatur. It's the best town in the state in a business way and in every other way. Boost Adams county, the greatest twelve townships that lie out of doors. Every boost is a help to you. Every knock is a detriment.

George Bitler of Fort Wayne today became treasurer of the state of Indiana, some accomplishment for a young man of some thirty summers, and especially so when the place was earned by the individual effort of the man himself. We are glad for him and we know he will succeed.

The contract has been let for the new Schafer block, the Haug block will be completed in the early spring, more than twenty roads, and several streets will be built this year, the outlook for crops was never better at this season, it looks like a real prosperous year—and then, if we should be lucky and get the Clover Leaf division, a factory or two that seems possible—it would be great. Let's get them. It will be better for every one and all these things are possible if we just stand together and do a little pushing.

The appointment by Governor Ranson of James Moran of Portland, a former resident of this county, where he was born and reared, as a judge of the appellate court, will be particularly pleasing to his hundreds of loyal friends in Adams county. He is well qualified and as judge of the Jay circuit court has made a splendid record. He will serve with great credit in his new position and will prove one of the strong men on the higher court bench. His aged father, who resides here, is proud indeed of the success of his son, as he has the right to be and every one joins him in this feeling. Judge Moran is an able lawyer, a splendid citizen, a wise counsellor and the governor made no mistake in selecting him to succeed the late Judge Powers. Jacob Denny, who succeeds Mr. Moran as judge of the Jay circuit court, is also well known here and will make a good record on the bench.

Gee whiz! Jim Watson disagrees with Mr. Bryan! He said so to the legislature. Well, he never did agree.

with him that we heard of. Neither has he ever agreed with any one else except those of the inside ring of the republican party. Mr. Bryan took in a lot of territory in his Indianapolis speeches. He said he was out for a good time and knew he was going to have it from the number of speeches he was billed for. He knew he was preaching a lot of politics that would only serve to stir up ideas, while some of it will some day become real, but that has been his business for twenty years, thinking ahead of his party and his country, and saying those thoughts in a way that causes discussion. All that Jim Watson has done, on the other hand, is to oppose him. Which do you honestly think is the best citizen? Which man does the most for his fellow man?

By 1916 the policies of the party will have worked out. If they work out well, as they now promise; if the country prospers and business moves strongly and actively, no power of noise, or subtlety of malice, or spitting of rage can prevent another democratic victory. If a year hence Mexico is at peace and in process of reconstruction and restoration, our policy toward her will be vindicated. If by that time peace is returning to Europe and we can have an honorable and potent part in causing fair and humane adjustments and settlements, the unanimous sentiment of the country will be "Thank God for the leadership we have; thank Him devoutly that that leadership is not Roosevelt or Hearst, or any other charlatan or sensation monger or professional hero. These shirkers forget that the great body of the men who sincerely doubted and steadily opposed Mr. Wilson in 1912 are now his staunch friends and have been taught by his conduct to believe in him; and where they expect or hope to find a following is difficult to imagine.—Roanoke Times.

Friendships.

May the law of Sallust always remain engraved on the heart of your king. "Not with the help of armies nor treasures do kingdoms continue to flourish, but with the help of friends, and these cannot be gained by force nor bought with gold; they are won by acts of kindness and by faithfulness." And, moreover, "it is necessary always to live in unity with one's own; by concord the smallest things become great, whilst by discord the greatest are reduced to nought." Let him remember the example of M. Agrippa, who thought much of this precept which alone may speak of your royal master a good brother, a good comrade, a good friend, a good king. Next to God let nothing be dearer to him than friendships. Let him always implicitly trust the man he once found worthy of his friendship and, according to the advice of Seneca, let him prove his friends in all things, but take care first to prove himself also.

Slow in contracting friendships, let him be even more slow in breaking them asunder, and if possible, never let him do so.—Petrarch.

"UNDER COVER."

Great Play to be Seen at the Majestic in Ft. Wayne.

"Under Cover," an exciting new American play by Roy Cooper Meguire, which has proved the theatrical sensation of the year in both New York and Chicago, in each of which cities it has been running to crowded houses for months past, will be presented by Sedwyn & Company at the Majestic theater, Fort Wayne, Friday night and Saturday matinee and night. "Under Cover," if reports speak true, is a play which will interest a large variety of people, and one which will interest them so much that they will want to go again. It is a frank melodrama of the modern American kind, and the interest begins with the rise of the curtain. There are repeated and increasing crescendos of suspense, the action is rapid, the subject timely and Selwyn & Co. promise a cast which will be excellent in every particular.

"Under Cover" is truly a mystery play, therefore it is not advisable to reveal the full story of the piece. Yet even knowing it repeated visits do not detract from the entertainment. The story deals with a secret service investigation of smugglers and grafters. A certain man is known to have bought an expensive necklace in Paris and does not declare it when his ship reaches New York. He is followed by secret service men to the home of a fashionable family on Long Island. The detective, by reason of his knowledge of a young woman's defrauding a jewelry insurance company, compels her elder sister to give him assistance. Their pursuit of the smuggler gives the audience a rapid succession of laughs and thrills, and in the end the story ends happily.

In "Under Cover," the author, Mr. Meguire has made his first real success. In it he shows the hand of a good craftsman. The lines are bright, the business is skillfully planned to help every point and as adroitly carried out. Selwyn & Co., who are responsible for that other great success, "Within the Law," has given "Under Cover" the same careful direction as marked their earlier production. It is said to be a play which will make friends wherever presented.

DENOUNCES ANY CONNECTION.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 10—(Special to Daily Democrat)—Governor Ranson today issued a statement in which he denounced as "absolutely unsound" and "as the creation of an over-worked newspaper scribbler," the story that the gubernatorial nomination for 1916 entered into the selection of Judge J. J. Moran of Portland to the appellate bench. He said Moran was supported by Congressman Adair of Portland and, was well qualified for the position.

THE PUNK POETRY

Candy and Flowers to Hold
Sway Next Sunday—
Valentine Day.

LITTLE DAN CUPID
Will Persuade the Johannies to Part With Some of Their Good Money.

The Indianapolis Star hits the nail on the head when it says:

"Sunday is the day that Cupid goes to it in his shirt sleeves, lights a large, black cigar, and hangs the 'Busy' sign on the door.

"February 14—St. Valentine's day—the day when every one is entitled to get soured on sentiment.

"Do you remember the dear old days, back in the last century, when she thought she was doing very well, thanks, if you sent her a valentine of paper lace with pink cupids and blue roses on it, and a pair of clasped mitts with 'True Regard' up at the top, and some ferocious poetry on the inside of the folder?

"Ah—they was the good old days! "Today, if you sent her a valentine like that she would gaze at it with the same expression of affectionate joy that she would turn on a thousand leg." That stuff is all right for the school kids, maybe, but after that, it simply won't do.

"Sunday is the day when the florists and the candy foundries reap a large and bountiful harvest.

"The offerings are graded, too. For example, a little bunch of violets bears friendly interest, a bigger bunch, more interest. As for a wagon load of American Beauties—when she gets those she begins to figure on which kind of style she likes best for the announcements—the Old English or the curly kind.

"Just in the same way, the five-pound box of a $1-a-pound chocolates, reposing in their heart-shaped basket, lined with pink satin, tell a far-different story from the pound box of caramels—although, at that, she may like the caramels better.

"For days and days all the little boys have been saving up their pennies to buy valentines for the little girls that sit across the aisle, and the little girl that rounds up the most lace paper valentines is the heroine of the day. But—say—did you ever get a 'comic'? It's perfectly awful to get a comic.

"It's the old fashion not to send any name along with a valentine offering, but this is bad policy, because a hated rival may get ahead of you, and take a long chance, and get all the credit. There have been villains base enough to say, when they come in and see the flowers, or the candy for which you parted with all your week's lunch money, I'm glad to see you enjoying them, Ermentrude, when they never heard of the candy or the flowers before. Then Ermentrude gives the villain all the credit for having sent them, and gives you, Percival, the cold, cold eye when you drift around the next evening because you didn't have enough sentiment to send her a valentine.

"However—there's one thing in favor of St. Valentine's day—it gives temporary jobs to some of the worst poets in the world, and you know the poets must live. Why must they live?—Oh, to write the poetry for the valentines!"

MASS MEETING.

This evening at 7:30 o'clock will be a union mass meeting of all the churches in the city at the Evangelical church in the interest of the Honeywell meetings, to begin February 21. Let there be a large attendance and crowd the church. Gool singing, speaking, and fellowship are some of the good things in store. A cordial invitation to the public to attend.

People should never give an opinion about something they know absolutely nothing about and have never tried.

Don't be like the following PEOPLE:

A man and wife drove 40 miles to see the first steam train. When they got there, the engineer had steam up everything oiled and ready to start. The man turned to his wife and said: "Mandy, that thing will never go." Just then the bell began to ring, the engineer pulled his throttle, and the train started. The man and wife watched it out of sight. Then turning to his wife the man said: "Mandy, that thing will never stop." Do you get the point? He would not allow himself to be convinced.

MUSICAL EVENT

Euterpean Club Charmingly Entertains Friends at "Guest Day" Party

AT K. OF P. HOME

Last Evening—Music Talent of Club Gives a Fine Program.

A very charming "guest day" entertainment was accorded their friends last evening at the Knights of Pythias home by the Euterpean club. The spacious lodge room on the second floor was arranged in auditorium style and a committee of young ladies from the club, as ushers, seated the one hundred seventy guests for the musical which was the form of the entertainment proper. In the receiving line to welcome the guests as they arrived, were the club president, Mrs. J. S. Peterson and Mrs. W. Tyndall.

That the club is one of real culture, education and charm was manifest by the character of the musical, the numbers of which were given by the music section of the club, and consisted of selections which are given at the regular club meetings.

So delightful have they proved to the club members that the club president prevailed upon them to give them for their friends at this guest day observance.

The section also had the pleasure of the presence of Miss Kathryn Egly of Berne, a very charming singer, whose voice added much to the program and delighted the audience.

The club has much musical talent of a high order and every number was rendered with perfection, of which the audience was highly appreciative.

Mrs. Jesse Daily served as accompanist for the vocalists. The program follows:
