Entered at the Postoffice in Decatur, Indiana, as second-class matter.

The 100 per cent candidate hasn't given up yet, but announces that he will. He seems after all to rather agree with the "watchful waiting" policy.

The official count in California shows a slight gain for President Wilson with a dozen of the fifty eight counties in. It is believed that the official returns will give the president a lead of about 4,900.

Did you know that Grover Cleveland was elected president in 1884 by a much closer margin than Wilson has been this year? That year the results depended on New York state and less than 600 votes would have given Blaine the presidency.

We have several business propositions on our desk that ought to have the attention of Decatur business men. We should get busy right now on that line. Decatur can be a busy city in 1917 with a little pushing from the men who hold property and business here. Will you help?

It was generally supposed that the experience of the democrats at Terra Haute two years ago would have had the effect of curbing the crooked politicians in Indiana but evidently those men who tried to swing Lake county for the g. o. p. thought they had some special rights. Its about five to one that they will wish they had learned their lesson better when Frank Bailey gets through with them.

It is claimed that $200,000 was spent in Lake county this year by the republican politicians and that 16,000 votes were influenced. Two years ago democratic officials investigated charges and convicted a hundred or more men who were charged with election frauds. Certainly men of every party should be treated alike and if these charges are true it remains only for the proper steps to be taken and the men punished that similar practices in the future may be lessened.

Kicking over precedents has been a habit of Woodrow Wilson ever since his college days. His re-election to the presidency after losing such important states as New York, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan, is his latest and most inspiring feat in upstating traditions. In 1879 as a student at Princeton, Tom W. Wilson began his precedent smashing. Later, when he became president of the university, he kicked over some more established customs, and as governor of New Jersey he did the same thing. For the past four years, as president of a great republic, he has refused to be chained by conventions. He has followed his own inclinations at times when so doing would seem to the ordinary man akin to political suicide. Everybody thought the governor's goose was cooked when, before the democratic nomination in 1912, he asked George Harvey, editor of Harper's Weekly, to stop supporting him. "Your support is hurting my candidacy," said Wilson, in effect—this in spite of the fact that Harvey was known as the "original Wilson man" and had suggested the Wilson name for the presidency as early as 1904, when to most people even in New Jersey he was known merely as a rather independent college president. In fact other sections were booming Wilson for the presidency long before New Jersey even considered him seriously as a possible governor.—Lafayette Courier.

TO END RACE DETERIORATION

Matter That is Very Largely in the Hands of the Mothers of the Nation.

"The death rate in this country from diseases of the heart, blood vessels and kidneys has increased 14 per cent in 20 years," declares a noted leader in the widespread movement among clubwomen for household efficiency. "What accounts for this appalling increase? There is a lack of that something in the human system which is necessary to guard it against deterioration and the threatening multitudes of the ever-present microbes. The invisible enemies have conquered. How much of this is owing to our imperfect knowledge of the relative values of the elements contained in foods, to the lack of adequate and hygienic heating, ventilating and plumbing systems, to the feeding of the nation on denatured and adulterated food, we do not know. But a realization of the seriousness of this question makes us feel that the general haphazard occupation of housewife requires the most intelligent attention of every woman who takes it up.

"It is only recently that women have begun to realize that housekeeping is a profession requiring their best intelligence, and that it can and should be standardized. For years the kitchen has been relegated to the basement or to the darkest corner of the apartment, and the whole question of buying and cooking the family rations has been dismissed as speedily as possible by the average housekeeper. This should not be. The solution of the food problem is in the hands of the women. Wholesome, nutritious food is absolutely essential to the well-being of the family. You cannot successfully feed a fine racehorse on waste products, and you cannot nourish a fine race of people on poor food."

TIBETANS KNEW OF TOBACCO

Good Evidence That the "Filthy Weed" Was Used in That Country Many Centuries Ago.

It is generally supposed that tobacco was unknown in the Old World until after the discovery of America. But there is excellent evidence that it was known and used in Tibet as early as 377 B. C. In a note to an article in the Geographical Review Dr. Barthold Lauffer of the Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago, wrote as follows:

"Among the many curiosities of the Tibetan-English dictionary, published in 1902 by Sarat Chandra Das, the well-known Bengali student of Tibetan and explorer of Tibet, we read that the evil drug tobacco (in Tibetan thamka) appeared in ancient time about 100 years after the death of Buddha, which would yield the date 377 B. C., and that mention is made of tobacco also in the writings of a lama who is dated in the twelfth century A. D. In 1908 I enjoyed the privilege of spending several months in 'Lhasa Villa,' the house of Das in Darjeeling, and when one evening, in the course of a learned conversation with him, I ventured to draw his attention to this chronological anomaly and the post-Columbian introduction of tobacco into Europe and Asia, he replied: 'This is your tradition, and that (pointing to the passage in his dictionary) is our tradition; and our traditions certainly are as good as yours.'"

Concerning the Doorway.

You can tell as much about a house from its doorway if you really study the matter as you can about a man from a handshake. Just as you often intuitively feel, after a handclasp with a stranger, that you are or are not going to cultivate his acquaintance further, so you will or will not instinctively be made desirous by a house's entrance of knowing its interior. A doorway is the most intimate inanimate thing I know. And if for no other reason than because of its natural prominence, the front entrance of a house should be made as attractive as architectural style and good taste will permit. It is usually the first detail to be observed by passers-by, and, therefore, creates the most lasting impression. Charles Alma Byers, in Country-side Magazine.

Matches.

The principle of the ignition of sulphur and phosphorus by friction was discovered in 1680. An Englishman named Walker made a kind of match about 150 years later. The first patent granted in the United States for a friction match was to Alonzo D. Phillips, October 24, 1836.

Previous to the invention of matches, flint—a variety of quartz—were much used for the production of fire, the flint being struck repeatedly against a piece of steel, from which small particles were detached which were rendered red hot by the friction. These were caused to fall into a mass of very dry and highly inflammable matter, known as "tinder," which took fire from them.

Quakers Proud of Pedigree.

The Quaker custom, exemplified in the burial ground of Jordans, of not marking the resting places of the dead with memorial stones, is not so universally followed by them now. But if no outward record is kept, the Society of Friends has remarkably complete records of their own doings and their registers of births, marriages and deaths are among the most complete in existence. Friends, indeed, are great on pedigrees, and they are as proud of old Quaker blood as other people are of more aristocratic descent.

CLOTHES THAT ARE WORTH THE PRICE

You can easily pay the price of good clothes without getting value for your money; there are lots of such clothes. That's one of the reasons why we make a special of Hart, Schaffner & Marx and Clothescraft clothes.

The value you pay for is in the goods, the material, the all-wool fabrics, the tailoring, the style; you get value in these goods. It's a good deal to get in these days when cheap stuff is so common, and so deceptive.

We Have HART, SCHAFFNER & MARX $18. to $25.
We Have CLOTHCRAFT $10. to $18.

REAL ESTATE INVESTMENTS

Dear Friends:—The election is now over. Now is the time to forget politics and get down to business. There is quite a bit of idle money in this community seeking investment. Why should it not be invested in farms? A more sensible and profitable investment cannot be offered than in Adams County lands. The revenue is good and the values are continually increasing.

We know that we can show you some property that is worth the money and that will grow into more money and at the same time take care of the money invested. Let us tell you about it. Thanking you, we are, yours respectfully,
