POTATO VALUE

In Bread Making Recognized—Potato Flour Mixed With Wheat.

IS VERY DELICIOUS

When Made Into Bread—Keeps Moist Longer Than Ordinary Bread.

The pressure of war conditions has brought to light the value of potatoes in bread making, both in England and America. As an economy in England potato flour was mixed with wheat and a peculiarly delicious bread resulted. In this country potato flour is not available to the average housewife, and the U. S. department of agriculture has therefore devised recipes for the making of bread with simple, plain boiled potatoes mixed with the wheat flour.

This bread is said to be not only a complete success from the economy standpoint, where potatoes are cheap and plentiful, but to supply an attractive novelty in the household menu, and a welcome variation from the usual bread monotony. It has a rich brown crust, is tender and elastic, and the flavor is preferred by many to the bread wholly of wheat. It contains more moisture than ordinary bread, and therefore has longer keeping qualities.

For the making of potato bread, at the present time, it is advisable to use the early perishable potatoes, since the later varieties are capable of storage until spring. "Culls" also may be used.

SOLDIERS REQUIRE OSTEOPATHY

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 9.—Profiting by the experience of the allied armies in Europe, American troops are not going to suffer from the lack of specialists in mechanical adjustment to repair the crippled and nervous wrecks produced by the thousands in this modern war. The American Osteopathic association at its annual convention, which is in session here all this week, perfected arrangements for an adequate supply of osteopathic physicians and surgeons for the United States army and navy, and offered them to the government. A bill has been introduced in congress providing for this service, and osteopathic patients all over the country are writing the war department insisting that their sons in the service be attended by practitioners of the school of practice to which they are accustomed. In Europe the old school physicians admit that they cannot handle the enormous amount of mechanical treatment necessary to the British parliament has been interpolated to know why osteopaths were not employed in the service. The first announcement of a cure for the so-called "incurable" form of deafness, nerve deafness, was the most important event of the convention, aside from the war preparations. Dr. John Deason of Chicago is the discoverer. He reported on 500 cases which had been absolutely differentiated from the curable forms of deafness. He claims that he results in 90 per cent of these cases which all authorities assert are absolutely incurable. The method includes osteopathic adjustment, irrigation of the nose with four gallons of warm antiseptic solution and the removal of all adhesions from the throat by osteopathic "finger surgery."
