YELLOW PERIL

Is At Hand—Orange and Bright Golden Hues Betoken Approach OF THE AUTUMN

Maggie Rohe Gives the Latest Dope on Milady's Dress—What is Doing.

The yellow peril now is near. We're due to have a jaundiced year. And fruity shades of citron hue. May make a lemon out of you.

(By Margaret Rohe, Written for the United Press)

New York, Aug. 15.—What a long tail our hat has! All the new perky little sultan turbans of crushed velvet, round velvet sailor shapes with rolled up brims and, in fact, almost all the early Autumn millinery models have a long swishing tassel of vivid silk dangling from their midst. Whether it be of the self-same tone as its parent chapeau, as is the case usually where the hat is of black, dark brown or henna or whether it be a striking contrast the sprouting tassel bobs about ubiquitously and also about pretty ears and about six or eight inches long.

Under the head of the contrast class, but bound to be on the head of the class, is a sultan turban of the vividest Chinese vermilion velvet, with a tassel of the vividest

Chinese green silk. Velvet is already very much to the fore and the fore-mentioned Chinese vermilion is a new shade of orange called capicum, which brazenly rivals for very brilliance the rays of the August sun. It is one of the most popular of the new shades which run the gamut of all the yellows and browns. In fact you have to be jaundiced to be jaunty this fall. Fall fashions are fruitful and you must either be an orange or a citron to be truly chic. So pick your fruit and color your hat and your life accordingly.

Naturally these hectic orange shades are used on the suits and frocks merely as highlights in embroidered touches here and there, but for evening gowns the entire costume partakes of the vivid hue. Suits and frocks are rather of some golden tint of brown or creamy beige and in the Fall Paris models it is amusing to note the multitudinous names used to designate the varying shades of tan. They vary only by a breath one from another and yet each boasts an entirely separate and exclusive appellation. Ecru, beige, mastic, putty, clay, old ivory, bisque champagne (alas that and a new shade called bee fill only the glass of fashion nowadays) and going a bit deeper are bronze, wood brown, tobacco, a few red ecres of last season's red brown rust, henna, and mahogany and lastly, the deep dark depths of tete de nigre.

Black has been worn so persistently all summer in the ebon satin frocks and gowns so dearly loved of the Parisian female heart that a blossoming into the vivid yellows and warm browns this fall will be a welcome chameleon change. We can not shake black off completely, however, and its sombre hues will still swathe us nily in both satin and velvet lengths, just as our penchant for having the blues will always stick to us in the form of navy blue serge till the millennium. Then only will the emancipation from any clothes at all free us from the blue of serge forever surging round us.

Fine feathers also added their orange and brown tinted hues to aid our Autumn millinery and the all feathered close turbans of the orange breasted and bronze toned pheasant is a symphony of color tones. Paradise too flaunt their yellow beauties au naturelle nor longer droop under the black fear of premature dyeing.

HERE AGAIN TOMORROW

Captain Richmond of Fort Wayne, the advertising man and ad writer will be in the city again Saturday morning and will call on Decatur merchants and take care of their advertising. He was here yesterday afternoon but was unable to visit with all the merchants who are employing his services and will therefore make the extra trip in the morning. He is doing exceptionally fine with the advertising plan and the local merchants are more than pleased with the results.
