

Why Measles May Be Dangerous

This is No. 3 of a series of advertisements, prepared by a competent physician, explaining how certain diseases which attack the air passages—such as Pneumonia, Influenza, Whooping Cough, Measles or even a long continued Cold—often leave these organs in an inflamed, congested state, thus affording a favorable foothold for invading germs. And how Vick's Vapo-Rub may be of value in this condition.

Few of us escape measles—it is one of the commonest of childhood diseases. Every mother knows the symptoms, but the mistake that most mothers make is in failing to realize that the child is not fully recovered after the eruption and fever disappear. The air passages are still inflamed and if this inflammation is not cleared up, the air passages may be weakened, thus paving the way for pneumonia or serious disease of the lungs.

Nightly applications of Vick's VapoRub will aid nature in relieving this inflammation. Because Vick's acts locally by stimulation thru the skin to draw out the inflammation, attract the blood away from the congested spots and relieve the cough. In addition, the medicinal ingredients of Vick's are vaporized by the body heat. These vapors are breathed in all night long, bringing the medication to bear directly upon the inflamed areas. Children's digestions are delicate—easily disturbed by too much "dosing." Vick's, therefore, is particularly recommended since it is externally applied and so can be used often and freely without the slightest harmful effects.

Vicks should be rubbed in over the throat and chest until the skin is red—then spread on thickly and covered with hot flannel cloths. Leave the clothing loose around the neck and the bed clothes arranged in the form of a funnel so the vapors arising may be freely inhaled. If the cough is annoying, swallow a small bit of Vicks the size of a pea.

Samples to new users will be sent free on request to the Vick Chemical Company, 233 Broad Street, Greensboro, N. C.

The AMERICAN LEGION

ALONG THE LINE OF MARCH WITH THE NATIONAL SERVICE MEN

(Copy for This Department Supplied by National Headquarters of the American Legion)

THEY ARE BACK INTO "CITS" AND THE AMERICAN LEGION

The American Legion is experiencing a rapid growth, and has just passed the 8,000 mark in the number of posts established. Recent reports showed New York in the lead with 851 posts; Pennsylvania, second, with 522 posts; Illinois third, 494 posts; Iowa, 427; Minnesota, 409; Ohio, 357; Michigan, 256; Indiana, 247; Massachusetts, 245; New Jersey, 244.

STARTED LEGION IN FRANCE

Franklin D'Olier, National Commander, One of the Twenty Men to Found Organization.

Franklin D'Olier, national commander of the American Legion, was born April 23, 1877, in Burlington, N. J., where he attended local school and prepared for Princeton university. He was graduated from Princeton in 1898, and immediately entered business with his father, William D'Olier & Co., commission merchants in cotton and yarns, in Philadelphia. Upon his father's retirement from business, the firm name was changed to Franklin D'Olier & Co.

Mr. D'Olier entered the military service of the United States in April, 1917, as a captain in the quartermaster corps. After a few weeks' service at the Philadelphia depot and several months at Boston he was ordered to France in August, 1917. Owing to great scarcity of tonnage at that time and the necessity for salvaging material on a large scale, Mr. D'Olier was assigned to the newly organized salvage service, and in January, 1918, took command of the first salvage depot that was operated by the American army. Within six months the work had grown so rapidly that the personnel increased from 12 to 6,000, and this depot was salvaging for about 750,000 men, and was larger than any depot operated by either the British or French armies. This depot was at St. Pierre des Corps near Tours, France, the headquarters of the service of supply.

In July, 1918, Captain D'Olier was ordered to Lyons, France, to organize the second large depot, which at the time of the armistice had a capacity of taking care of salvaging for upward of a million and a half men. He was promoted to the rank of major, and then lieutenant colonel, and assigned to the general staff, and after two years' service in the army, 20 months of which was in the A. E. F., was discharged from the service in April, 1919.

Mr. D'Olier was one of the original 20 men who initiated the American Legion in France, February 15, 1919, and attended the Paris caucus of the American Legion on March 15, 1919. After his discharge from the service Mr. D'Olier joined Theodore Roosevelt, who was at that time—early in 1919—perfecting the preliminary organization of the American Legion in the United States preparatory to the St. Louis caucus, May 8, 9 and 10.

Mr. D'Olier was chairman of the Pennsylvania delegation at the St. Louis caucus and a member of the national executive committee from Pennsylvania. After the St. Louis caucus he was placed in charge of the state organization division at national headquarters, New York city, and gave his entire time without any remuneration whatsoever to American Legion work.

In preparation for the Minneapolis convention.

Mr. D'Olier's work for the Legion has been to co-operate with and coordinate the work of the state organizations of the Legion and to direct the preparations for the Minneapolis convention.

For his work in France Mr. O'lier received a Distinguished Service Medal from the United States government and the Legion of Honor from the French government.

IN CHARGE OF HEADQUARTERS

National Adjutant, Man From State of Washington, Has Seen Much Military Service.

Lemuel L. Bolles, national adjutant of the American Legion, is in charge of national headquarters of the American Legion at Indianapolis. He is a native of Minneapolis. He was born in Minneapolis on August 21, 1885, attended common school there and the MacAllister Academy at St. Paul. He moved to Washington in 1904 and graduated from the University of Washington Law school. From 1907 to 1915 he was employed by the First National bank of North Yakima, and was assistant adjutant general of the state of Washington from June, 1916, to September, 1917.

Mr. Bolles served in all grades in Company E, 2nd Infantry, of the Washington National Guard from September, 1904, to 1914, and commanded that company from 1911 to 1914. He was called into federal service with the Washington National Guard in September, 1917, and joined the 41st division at Camp Greene, N. C., with which division he went overseas in December, 1917, and served as a lieutenant colonel on the general staff of the First corps from May 1, 1918, to March 3, 1919.

On his return to the United States in July, 1919, he was discharged from the service, and was requested by the national executive committee to assist in the organization of the American Legion in the preparation for the Minneapolis convention on the staff at national headquarters. Mr. Bolles was one of the original delegates to the Paris caucus of the American Legion last March.

None Down.

An elderly lady was questioning the ex-artilleryman. "And what was the most terrible sight you witnessed in the war?" she asked.

"Well, it was like this," replied the soldier. "We had just spotted a German machine gun nest with about twelve enemy gunners that were holding up our advance. We located the nest and put the first shot right in the middle of the Jerries."

"How dreadful," interrupted the old lady, "did it kill them all?"

"No'm," replied the soldier sadly, "it was a dud."

HOOSIER BILL'S RHYMES

By WILLIAM EMERSON ROGERS

IN MEMORY OF THE DEAD

Let's go to town tomorrow, Dad
an' watch the soldiers form
In battle line an' march along
in their ol' blue uniform.
Let's watch 'em fling Ol' Glory
out an' hear the muffled tread
Of footfalls an' soun' of drums
in Memory of the Dead.
Let us honor the Ol' boys, Dad
by turnin' out to see
The sacred forms of those who fought an' marched to Victory.
I want a place where I can see
those Vet'rans in faded blue
An' catch a glimpse of each proud face, proven so tried an' true.
Get me a place where I can look
upon each grayish head
An' see men march with tottering
steps to the City of the Dead.
There place upon each Comrade's
grave a bunch of roses red,
An' watch the tears flow down their cheeks a Tribute to the Dead.
An' Dad, when the Ol' Flag waves
unfurled unto the breeze
I want to hear the roll of drums
come floating thru the trees.
An' feel the tears come in my eyes
while listenin' to their tread.
For Dad, who knows, another year,
they'll lie there with the Dead.

BLUFFTONITES WEAR OVERALLS

The overall fad hit Bluffton Saturday evening.

The campaign against the high cost of men's clothing, which was started in some of the larger cities, when men of all stages in employment started wearing overalls as a boycott against the high prices in clothing, was noticeable in Bluffton Saturday evening.

Just how far the fad will go here is yet to be seen, but several young men appeared in crowds Saturday evening "dressed up" in overalls.

Two merchants today put in window displays of overalls in anticipation of increased business in that line.

Make School Garb.

At a meeting of the boys of the Bluffton high school this afternoon an agreement was reached by which the boys will don overalls as the school garb and thereby join the overall fadists in protest against high prices of clothing.

Last year the boys wore the khaki while doing military training. This year military training was abandoned. Spring suits for use during the remaining six weeks were found to be very high in prices—therefore the overall plan. The boys are enthusiastic over it.
