DON'T USE SAWDUST IN YOUR COFFEE

(United Press Service)
Syracuse, N. Y., July 17. — When anybody tells you that the sugar trust is cornering America's sawdust market, to sell the sugar that is contained in trees, don't believe them. It can't be done. There is sugar there, but not the sugar maker's kind of sugar so the sawdust factories will not be able to help pile up new fortunes for the sugar makers.

The nation was startled the other day by a scientist's announcement that there is an enormous amount of sugar in sawdust. A chance for the housewife to preserve fruit by sawdust seemed to be in the realm of possibility.

But the bubble has been pricked by the cold-blooded scientists of the New York State College of Forestry here. Here is what Dr. Louis E. Wise, one of Uncle Sam's war time chemists, at the New York State College of Forestry, says about sawdust sugar—read it and weep:

"An important sugar can be prepared from sawdust by hydrolysis with acid, but it must not be confused with the sugar of the breakfast table. This sugar, prepared from wood, is dextrose or glucose and is identical with sugar obtained by acid treatment of starch. The sugar is not identical, however, with sucrose, commonly termed 'cane sugar' or 'beet sugar.' Glucose is, however, widely used commercially, and is an important food-stuff. It is the principal component of corn syrups and the like, and has distinct nutritive value."

WANTS INCREASE

Warren T. McCray, Republican Candidate for Governor Fights for the

GOODRICH PROGRAM

Senator Watson Also Fighting the Indiana Federation of Farmers

Indianapolis, Ind., July 17. — Governor Goodrich has enlisted powerful allies to assist him in forcing his "rubber stamp" program through his second special session of the legislature. His most valuable support is coming from Senator James E. Watson, candidate for re-election to the United States senate, and Warren T. McCray, the republican gubernatorial nominee, but he is also finding much comfort in the actions of the other republican candidates for state office who are swarming about the legislative halls.

Not the least among those who have been helping the governor line up assemblymen inclined to balk at the specially prepared program is Ora J. Davies of Kokomo, republican candidate for state treasurer. Davies is the man whom the state board of accounts found short in his funds while serving as treasurer of Howard county.

The chief scene of interest, however, is the headquarters of Watson and McCray in the Claypool hotel. During the first few days of the session when some of the legislators were voicing protests against the "cut and dried" plan of Governor Goodrich a stream of republican assemblymen and workers poured into the offices of the leading candidates. Of course just what transpired in these many conferences was not divulged but it was learned on good authority that Watson and McCray were doing their utmost to show the recalcitrant lawmakers the virtues of the Goodrich program.

Of particular interest in this connection was McCray's insistence that the legislature adopted the Goodrich cure-all bill legalizing the horizontal tax increases recently declared illegal by the state supreme court. The nominee's activity in behalf of the legalization of a measure held illegal by the highest court in the state came as somewhat of a surprise to the representatives of the Indiana Federation of Farmers, who are here fighting the adoption of the amendment.

McCray, it was recalled, had based his primary campaign on the statement that he was a farmer and that he was opposed to certain features of the tax law as advocated by Governor Goodrich. When it was learned that he was throwing his influence into the balance in favor of the Goodrich plan the federation officials were highly indignant and charged that he had repudiated his campaign pledges made in stumping the state in behalf of his nomination.

While neither Watson nor McCray are in evidence around the state house, the lesser candidates have become quite active there. They are a unit in backing up the Goodrich plan, having endorsed the bills in a secret session before they were submitted to the legislators themselves.
