HARDING.
WATSON AND McCRAY:

"There is no desire on the part of the people of this country for Harding for president." After his own people in Ohio gave him such a humiliating treatment in the preferential primary he ought as a matter of decency to have withdrawn his claims. As a matter of fact the public thinks that he "is altogether too close to the old reactionary gang."

And the Fort Wayne News was right in this estimate of Harding and his political character.

It was a serious effort to nominate Watson for the senate. His record is "a heart-breaking load to carry." The laboring people naturally will not support a man who has been so intimately identified with the organization having for its principal purpose the destruction of the labor organizations of the nation.

And the Fort Wayne News was right in this estimate of Watson and his record.

The time has come for straight talk about McCray's record in regard to tax dodging, and concerning the charges made against him relative to his financial reaction to the war. These charges are serious. The people are naturally interested. It is time for McCray to make himself clear.

And the Fort Wayne News was right in its severe comments on Mr. McCray and his record.—Fort Wayne Journal Gazette.

Through action taken by the board of directors of the Knights of Columbus at Chicago, Sunday, the board has announced that it will offer $5,000,000 to the American Legion for the purpose of erecting a memorial to the Americans who died in the war. The memorial, according to the announcement, is to be a building with quarters for national organizations of veterans of all wars, and a large auditorium where conventions can be held. The proposed munificent gift is the remainder of the war fund raised by the Knights of Columbus. The fund was raised for the benefit of the armed forces, and this may be regarded as a suitable method of applying the balance to a project in harmony with the organization's war plans. The American Legion has already accepted a gift of approximately $500,000 from the Y. M. C. A., the money being the profits from overseas canteens conducted by the Y. M. C. A. on orders from the army. The Legion decided to devote this fund to the relief of disabled former service men and to the promotion of its Americanization campaign. The K. of C. offer is for a definite purpose and its acceptance involves considerations of great importance. The Legion is naturally eager to obtain satisfactory headquarters for the organization. The state of Indiana is committed to a plan to erect in Indianapolis a combined war memorial and headquarters building similar to that mentioned in the announcement of the K. of C. gift. Inasmuch as local interests have defeated one movement—of an entirely different character, however—to move the headquarters from Indianapolis to Washington, the conference on the new project between the K. of C. committee and officers of the American Legion will be followed with great interest. The generosity and patriotic spirit shown by the Knights of Columbus in this offer is of the highest order and a worthy contribution to the welfare of the Legion.—Indianapolis News.

Before the Indianapolis Star started on its wiggly, wobble program in its attempt to keep up with Senator Harding it was very pronounced in its views for the league of nations and took the right stand that the league was the paramount issue in the national campaign. Now it is making excuses for Harding's utterances and no doubt regrets that it pledged itself to support the colorless candidate for the presidency. In a recent editorial the Star said, "The people are not likely to take kindly to a proposal for the appointment of a new commission to spend months negotiating a separate peace treaty with Germany and Austria, and one which we would have to enforce without the co-operation of any nations. All the many complications and claims that would be involved have been disposed of in the treaty of Versailles, which Germany has already signed. The simple and effective route to peace with Germany is as far as we are concerned, is to ratify what has been accomplished. There is no contention in this country that the Versailles peace terms are not satisfactory to us, or that we could do as well in a separate compact." No, the Star is supporting Harding on the grounds that the league and peace treaty should be rejected. When it comes to wobbling it falls in the same class with the republican candidate.

Harding has no program and as yet has not stated what he stands for. Proving this fact, the Berne Witness gives space to the following reason why Harding thinks he should be elected to the presidency:

"I should be elected President," says Senator Harding, because the Republican party, which I represent, an summons to serve with me the most competent men in the executive, legislative, judicial and diplomatic departments of our government."

Since the above statement comes from the republican organ of the county we take for granted that Harding hopes to win on those grounds. No show for anyone outside of the senatorial clique.

Senator Harding has come and gone and no one except those who were going to vote for him anyway, regardless of his visit were very much impressed with the republican candidate for the presidency. In his three minute talk, Harding did not declare himself on a single thing, and did not say anything but what could be uttered by any American citizen. Indeed his visit to this city proved to hundreds that he is the same weak Harding as he was in the primary. He received 85 votes in Adams county and 48 in Wells county.

Hear Hon. Samuel Foster and Miss Mary Kolb at the court house this evening. Mr. Foster is one of the most progressive business men in the state and is competent to discuss the important issues of the campaign. Miss Kolb has a wonderful message on the league of nations and every woman should hear her.

Pay your taxes on November 1st and swat the tax law on Tuesday, November 2nd. It is your only chance.

Why build $82,000 garages in Indianapolis when Adams county could use a portion of this money in the upkeep of the roads?

LEAGUE OF NATIONS RELIGIOUS SIGNIFICANCE

The Christian Herald prints in its current issue a signed article by Governor James M. Cox. The Christian duty towards our associates and even toward the people of enemy lands is stressed in almost every paragraph. For the introduction to his article Governor Cox has chosen a quotation from the epistle of Timothy, "Fighting the Good Fight of Faith."

A Text for the Campaign.
"These words," he says, "might well be our text for the campaign before the American people, which within the limits of our strength has been carried to every fireside in this broad land of ours. Ours is a fight of faith—faith with the world that accepted our statement of unselfish purpose, faith with fathers and mothers, wives and loved ones who gave their sons, husbands and brothers to war upon war; faith with those who made sacrifices in homes, faith with those who toiled with the living and faith with the dead."

"As leader of a great organization which had its part in interpreting the aspirations of the American people and in shaping Americanism through the generations, we have been invested with a sacred commission, amandated by the reckless bravery of our sons and ennobled by the heart impulses of our daughters. Through circumstances not of our own choosing, we have become the custodians of the honor of the nation, we have been called to fight the good fight of faith."

Clergy indorses League.
"It is not a subject of marvel that practically every denominational and interdenominational gathering of religious men that has been held since the Versailles covenant was adopted has included an indorsement of that great document."

"Alloof from contentions of partisans," the article continues, "freed from the bigotry engendered by factionalism, looking upon national questions through the windows of light and truth, he banded followers of the Man of Nazareth have seen the question shorn of false claims. In a word, Christians, speaking organically, with a voice that could not be misunderstood, have stated that they wish the League of Nations brought into effective being."

America's Heart Right.
"The great heart of America has always been right upon this great issue. There has never been a time when associations of men and women, independent of partisanship, have turned from the league proposal. America has freely in alms to every war-torn nation in the world. She sent her devoted bands of workers to relieve distress. She sent her purses to heal the sick. She sent her contributions to feed the hungry. She opened her warehouses to clothe the naked. She willingly gave her talent, through private auspices, to help bring life back to normal. Her men of finance gave counsel; they offered credit and we applauded."

houses to clothe the naked. She willingly gave her talent, through private auspices, to help bring life back to normal. Her men of finance gave counsel; they offered credit and we applauded.

"And the good that we sought to do was lost in our larger neglect. Weak tears that in helping the world, fantastic forebodings that in taking our stand for peace everlasting, imaginary perils that in service we might be surrendering our birthright of independence, restrained our more noble impulses. While famine stalked and the world cried to heaven for our help we debated selfish questions. Our nation became a silent but effective partner in undermining Christian civilization, causing the despairing peoples of Europe, friend and enemy alike, to turn, in very agony, to those who denied the fundamental precepts upon which our society rests."
