

Spring Beckons in New Suits

NEVER was a season more clearly interpreted in suits than the oncoming spring is. A survey of any representative collection of them leaves one impressed with this fact, and it is evident that designers have had it in mind in the choice of styles and colors, and that their interest is centering on new decorative features. The straight and flaring box-coat modes with loose sleeves widening toward the hand, suggest balmy weather. They are made collarless or with small turnover collars, and they reveal a variety of styles in their embellishments. Many of them are embroidered, others adopt the new crepe ribbons or silk band decorations, and an occasional model, running true to form in considering the Chinese inspiration of the style, shows coats with bright applique borders made of pieces of colored silks in various shapes applied with needlework in characteristic Chinese designs. But embroideries in self color and braid or ribbon decorations are universally admired.

Not all embroidered suits limit themselves to one color in their em-broderies, for many of them introduce either other colors or metallic threads in the design. A suit of this kind appears at the left of the two shown here with an elaborate pattern in self-color embroidery lightened by silver threads. In this model the skirt is a little shorter and a little narrower than the standard for the season, for manufacturers are inclined to favor the ideas of very young wearers—and others who hope to look youthful—by abbreviating skirts considerably. The sash of broad satin reveals the headway this feature of the styles is making and is given prominence by its width and long-fringed ends.

The bloused suit at the right is an elegant new arrival that will please those who like simple styles and smart lines. It dares challenge companions without any embellishment except the decorative rows of buttons on the coat and a fringed satin sash.

FOR THE FARMERS

Items of Interest to the Farmers of Adams County.

An interesting community meeting was held last night at the Kirkland township high school. The program was made up entirely of local talent and those taking part are to be complimented, considering that it was the first meeting of its kind this season. The next meeting will be held next Tuesday evening at the same place. A program committee was appointed to arrange the program for the next meeting.

The regular annual meeting of the Adams County Duroc Breeders' association will be held at the county agent's office next Saturday afternoon at 1:00 o'clock. Features have been arranged for the session. Election of officers to serve during the coming year will take place. Mr. Shanklin, authority on hogs and pig clubs at Purdue university, will be present.

Randolph County Has Highest Level Ground.

First state topographical model being made by Purdue students shows interesting features.

The highest level area in Indiana is in the southern part of Randolph county, 1225 feet, according to a new topographical model of the state which is being made by two senior students in civil engineering at Purdue University, who are working on this subject as their thesis necessary for graduation. The students, J. E. Mavity, Valparaiso, and C. W. Pfeiffer, Fort Thomas, Ky., have taken all the available sources of information, including geological surveys, surveyors' maps, topographical figures and other data that could be found. Their map, which has been checked for correctness by members of the civil engineering faculty, will be covered with plaster paris so that it may be reproduced and copies of it sent to the state house and other important points over the state.

No model showing the contour of Indiana has been made up to this time, it is said, and the one being turned out now is fairly accurate showing the general rises and falls in the surface of the state. The sharpest inclines have been found in Brown county and the highest spots in the state is there.

One of the unusual features shown on the model is the rise of several hundred feet between Lafayette and Indianapolis, coming in the vicinity of Lebanon. The cause of the numerous floods in the White River bottom lands is also shown when the heights of the land about the headwaters of both the northern and southern, especially the latter, branches of this stream are shown.

County lines will be drawn on the model so that it will show the approximate distance above sea level of all counties of the state. The students have spent several months gathering data and making the maps and model from them.

Such a model would be of great benefit in schools of the state, it is pointed out and would give the pupils a much better understanding of Indiana geography and conditions.

Care for Horses As Season Starts.

It is as hard to require a horse, not worked in the winter, to start in the spring and do a big day's plowing or other work as it is to expect a store clerk to go to the hay-field and do as much work as the seasonal harvest hand. This is the way Prof. R. B. Cooley of the animal husbandry staff of Purdue university and secretary of the Indiana station enrollment board put it recently when he wished to emphasize the importance of fitting horses for spring work so as to get the most from them and still keep them in good condition.

"Horses should be gradually prepared for their regular work by being given regular exercise and having their grain ration gradually increased," said Prof. Cooley. "Experience has shown that sudden changes in feed cause digestive derangement even though the work performed be proportionately increased. In addition, tion, tender shoulders are likely to become bruised and develop sores or abscesses that greatly decrease efficiency or use of the animal all together."

A small amount of work for the first few weeks with gradual change in feeding will save these troubles, says Mr. Cooley.

Clean collars, especially on the bearing surfaces, and slipping where the collar touches, especially if the hair is long and shaggy, will help prevent sore shoulders. Frequent stops in the field, and lifting collars forward on their necks to allow air to circulate also will aid in this and be profitable because of the greater amount of work they will do later.

One seed of cotton can produce 40,000,000,000 seeds in six years.

MARKETS-STOCKS

Daily Report of Local and Foreign Markets.

New York, March 3.—The New York stock market today showed a generally firm tone, a continuation of conditions at the close yesterday. Optimistic business statements and dividend actions were in part responsible, while strength in some lines was the result of short covering. Atlantic Gulf was off 1/4 on opening at 45 1/2 and dropped quickly to 44. There were many rumors as to the possible dividend action in that stock this afternoon.

Chandler also reflected the possibility of a dividend cut when it sold at 67 1/4, down 1 1/4. U. S. Rubber and U. S. Steel were unchanged.

Oils were higher.
