Safeguarding Your Money

A noted economist has recently said that the easiest thing to do in America is to make money and the hardest thing to do is to keep it. Statistics show that out of one hundred men starting equally at age twenty that thirty will be well to do at age forty but that at fifty-five all but two will have lost their fortunes. The large percentage of those who lose their fortunes is due to unwise investments outside of the lines which they know and against the advice of competent financial authorities.

The need for care in handling money is therefore imperative. We strongly urge that your investment affairs be entrusted only to institutions of high integrity and abundant resources.
