Most of his mighty miracles were performed because of his compassion for the woes of others. Wherever he saw pain, or sickness, or sorrow, or death, there he was with kind words, ministering deeds and loving, encouraging precepts.

Those who would walk in the footsteps of the Master cannot hope to do so and leave out the effort to relieve sickness, prevent suffering and stamp out every ill that flesh can experience. The co-operating effort of the people of Decatur and Adams county to provide a health-home which shall keep its doors open to every man, woman or child who suffers, is one of the most commendable efforts of the many public spirited enterprises in which this community has ever engaged.

I would emphasize two things; first, intensive and extensive instruction of every citizen concerning the body, its functions, its parts and its care. I would teach the importance of proper food, exercise, bathing and development. I would train men and women to observe the laws of health by taking every precaution to prevent dirt and filth and insanitary conditions of all kinds. The human race must learn to prevent disease before it even gets a start. Precautions costs less and is easier to apply than cure. Every reputable physician aspires to keep people healthy rather than to try to restore them after they are sick. Medical science of the future hopes to build up, rather than restore. The very complexity of society and the growing delicacy of the functions of human beings requires the most consideration and exact adjustment.

Behind all this, however, is still a broader principal. I know I have the support of every physician, every nurse and everyone at all interested, or informed about public health when I refer to it. Hospitals exist for those who are victims of broken health. Normal man is healthy. The good God never intended that any of his creatures should suffer. Disease is the penalty imposed by nature on those who directly or indirectly infringe upon natural Law. The heart of humanity is big enough to extend aid and pity even to those who err. But that is not the point I wish to make.

For all these, and other ideas, this Institution stands today. It is "for the people, for the people and by the people." As such we dedicate it in the name of the Great Physician, that it may become a haven of hope for the sick, that it may be a home of harmony for the deceased, that it may serve the highest purposes of those whose dream is this day come to pass in the name of the One who looked up on sick humanity and had compassion upon them, we consecrate it to the service of all those who are weary and heavy laden, that in them may find peace and health, and restoration to the normal paths of life.

Address Given By Dr. Harry G. Hill Yesterday

Dr. Harry G. Hill, president of the Indiana College of Music and Fine Arts, Indianapolis, in his address at the dedication of the Adams County Memorial Hospital yesterday, said in part:

Human institutions are the material symbols of human thought. Churches express our religious emotions; schools our respect and desire for knowledge; homes our love for our dear ones; and Government shows our desire to safeguard the common rights and secure the blessings of life for our neighbors.

A hospital is the institutionalizing of human sympathy, and the desire to relieve pain. Such institutions are erected by those who are well, for those who are sick. They are provisions for what may happen to anyone of us at any time.

No human quality is more God-like than sympathy. Sympathy is our effort to put ourselves in the other fellow's place, and enter fully into his thought and feeling. Sympathy is the volunteering to share any condition with others. This is unselfishness indeed! "Greater love hath no man than this, that he will lay down his life for a friend." ## Hiring a New Office Boy

THE ideal business organization is one where, when a member of the Board of Directors leaves, there is a general advance all along the line; a new office boy is hired and the machine is complete in every detail.

It is toward such an ideal that the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is striving.

In the selection of employees great care is taken to get young men who may be developed for positions of responsibility and trust. The results of this policy are to be seen by taking a careful check of the higher officers of this Company. Every one of these men has come up through the ranks, many from the lowliest beginning. They have won preferment by unusual fitness, by sheer ability and mastery of the particular work entrusted to their care.

It is this spirit of pure democracy which has made the organization of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) what it is today—a big, loyal, hard-working group of men and women, bound together by mutual consideration, respect and ambition.

The men in the ranks of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) have constantly before them the examples of those now directing the Company's activities. They know that there is an open road ahead, and that for the men who show unusual aptitude in any department of the business; unusual ability to vision the future, or to direct the immediate, there are no limitations placed upon advancement. Such men taken from the ranks, will be the directing heads a few years hence.

This spirit, permeating every employee from the top to the bottom, keys the entire organization to a pitch of efficiency which enables the Company to render a superior service to 30 million people of the middle west.
