LEGISLATURE RE-CONVENES

Expected To Get Down To Actual Debate On Measures This Week

(UNITED PRESS SERVICE)
Indianapolis, Jan. 19.—(Special to Daily Democrat)—The state legislature is expected to get down to actual debate this week on several measures which have already been reported out of committee or on which a committee report will be forthcoming during the week.

Both houses were to reconvene this afternoon at 2 o'clock after the weekend recess since last Friday. Senator English's bill providing heavier penalties for drunken drivers of automobiles was ready to furnish the battle ground in the upper house for the first tilt between bone dry prohibition forces and the liberal

The cooperative marketing bill sponsored by the Indiana Farm Bureau Federation may emerge during the week from the agricultural committees of both houses amended to overcome objections of elevator interests who say the original draft of the bill would kill cooperative elevators already in existence.

In the house the fight over the prohibition question will be launched when the morals committee reports on Representative Wright's bone dry bill to put teeth in the state prohibition laws. The committee is planning to report on the bill this week.

Numerous other committees in both houses were given early attention to bills referred to them and more committee reports than were ever made at a second week session of the legislature are looked for.

Great Lakes Region To See Big Building Boom

Chicago, Jan. 19.—The Great Lakes region in 1925 will see the greatest building boom since the war, Barney Cohen, district director of U. S. employment service, predicted today on the basis of a building prospectus of five midwest states.

Illinois heads the list of states with a gigantic state wide construction program.

Michigan falls in line with a contemplated increase of one-third of its building projects over last year, Cohen said.

Indications are that Wisconsin, In-

Republican Ranks Split In Indianapolis Election

Indianapolis, Jan. 12.—Stalwarts in the republican organization of Indianapolis waged war to preserve peace in their ranks today.

While harmony apparently had pre-valled in a majority of Indiana cities during the election of city chairmen last Saturday, there was a rump convention in Indianapolis with the result that two city committees and two chairmen are now seeking to guide the destinies of the C. O. P. here.

George V. Coffin, elected city chairman here by the forces that were victorious in the election last November, looked over the field of battle and counted the party casualties.

On the other side Ralph H. Lemcke who was elected city chairman by the forces of Mayor Lew Shank, glanced down the city payroll to weed out the unfaithful.

Meanwhile both factions set up headquarters and will leave it to the courts to decide who's who.
