Wealthy New York Men Find Their Missing Sons

Columbus, O., June 23.—(United Press).—"Found boys well. Returning New York. Thanks for your help," read a telegram received by the United Press today from Frank Harwood, who had filed it at Toledo, at 5 a. m. The brief message announced the end of a search by Harwood, advertising director of the America Tobacco company and Civil service commissioner, Charles S. Cossio, both of New York, for their sons Warner and Webster, respectively, who ran away from home several days ago on a lark.

New York newspapers today carried two small "ads" which testified to the anxiety caused in the Harwood and Cossio homes by the disappearance of the boys. One ad addressed to the Harwood boy read: "Warner—Mother greatly worried. Telephone or telegraph her collect. Everything is all right but wish to hear from you at once. Your friends." The other was addressed to the Cossio boy and read: "Webster—Please come home. Your mother is very ill, due to your absence. We are not angry. Will send money if you wish it. Telegraph to my office collect. Dad." The "ads" were inserted on the sport page.

Kiwanians Meet In St. Paul For Convention

St. Paul, Minn., June 23.—(United Press).—With 6,000 teazed and bagged Kiwanians parading the streets of St. Paul, first attempts today to bring the Kiwanis international into business session met with but little success. Bands, scores of them, accompanying each delegation to the convention proved the undoing of the first business session attempts.

Convention officials had succeeded in rounding up representative groups of Kiwanians for the first session in the large auditorium when the Kiwanis boys band from Illinois, 60 strong, paraded to the building, down the aisles and halted proceedings by playing the Illinois state song. Following closely, a giant band made up of delegation bands from Georgia, Alabama and Florida continued the program while Iowa delegations spelled out in business with "That's where the tall grows."

Pure, clean blood means a clear skin.

The Prime Function of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana)

A bulletin of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States says: "The function of business is to provide for the material needs of mankind and to increase the wealth of the world and the value and happiness of life." These words might have been written to describe the ideals animating the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

Among the more important "material needs" of society are the products of petroleum. When progress ushered in the industrial era, animal and vegetable oils were the only lubricants available and the quantity of these was insufficient to permit unlimited expansion.

Petroleum was discovered just when it was needed to supply the enormous quantities of lubricants required by this mechanical age.

The importance of gasoline as a servant of society came with the invention of the internal combustion engine and its application to the automobile. This product is now indispensable.

It is because the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has been able to produce gasoline in ever-increasing quantities that it has been able to render its greatest service in "increasing the wealth of the world and the value and happiness of life."

Where twenty years ago only a handful of automobiles were in operation, today there are 17½ millions in service.

The constant demand for gasoline has outstripped the increase in the production of crude oil.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has led the way in bridging this gap. It has accomplished this through such inventions as the Burton Cracking Process; through vision in anticipating future needs, and through ability to create an organization capable of functioning economically and efficiently under the stress of rapidly changing conditions.

The prime function of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is to provide society with a dependable service of oil products to meet its material needs and to increase the sum total of wealth available to the common good.

This Company takes profound pride in rendering this service and it believes that, in so serving, it deserves and earns the reasonable profits which are paid over to its stockholders in return for the use of the capital they have invested in the business.
