The mayor of Hamilton, Illinois, was fined $1,000 for the possession of eight barrels of liquor and three kegs of wine. It does look a little unreasonable that one man should have that much on hands these days and then be in a position to punish others who have a pint or a quart.

Farmers are reminded that right now is the time to secure seed corn for next spring. Go out in your field and select the very best ears and there are plenty of them, hang them in a dry place and by spring you will have excellent seed, thus avoiding a fancy price and assuring the right kind of a corn crop next year.

Indiana motorists paid nearly seven million dollars in gasoline tax during the year which ended September 30. That's a lot of money, paid in cash and in advance for better roads and the people have a right to expect much from those in whose hands the authority to act is placed. Roads should be built and maintained at the lowest cost, but with the best results.

If you could have attended at or a part of the school events yesterday, given as a reminder of the work of Mrs. Gene Stratton-Porter, you would have been thrilled by the interest of the pupils, young and old, and their knowledge of the idea to stimulate the study of those things in which this woman spent her life. It was fine and it was conclusive evidence that the movement for an Adams county Memorial will go over big.

Plans are going ahead for the organization of an Adams county company to purchase Belmont Park and operate an agricultural fair. A meeting of those from over the county who are interested will probably be held during the next few days and plans made for extending invitations to all who desire to help put over this big and important affair. If we will take a proper interest and boost the fair along we can put old Adams county on the map with a whoop, all have a good time and profit proportionately to our efforts.

The democratic candidates for city offices will make their campaign upon the records of the three last administrations, each of which has shown progress, care and wisdom in conducting the affairs of Decatur in such manner as to do the most with the least amount of money raised in taxes. The financial condition of the city is splendid and the improvements have been many. We are going forward and without a great burden to any citizen. Surely that is what you want and what you will continue to have.

We congratulate the members and pastor, the school principal and the trustees of St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran church in Root township for having reached the eightieth anniversary of that congregation and we are sure that the observance of that event tomorrow will be enjoyable, of much good to the community and the church, a wonderful occasion. Rev. A. Moeller and Prof. Paul Dorn are deserving of praise for their untiring and unselfish efforts. The church is located in the center of one of the finest sections of all the middle west, its members are as fine people as live on the globe and the steady growth of the church is an inspiration to those who believe that those are happiest who cling closest to the teachings of the Master. St. Peter's church has performed a great work and will continue to do so.

The state highway commission desires as soon as possible to take over the road between Huntington and the state line and believe they can do so by spring. An organization which will continuously remind them of their promises and call their attention to the need of such an improvement will help and that's the purpose or at least one of the purposes of the William Penn organization. Big men are back of this association, men who are actually striving for a paved road from Atlantic City to San Francisco and who will work until that accomplishment is performed. Its one of the most important projects which this county has had the opportunity to assist and those cities and towns which have a place on the map along the great coast to coast route will appreciate the work now being done by those in charge, after it has become one of the leading thoroughfares of the nation, as it is sure to be.

As was expected, the price of corn and hogs is dropping now when the farmer is getting ready to market his annual crop. 'Twas also thus and always will be unless some one can conceive a plan which will head off the stock gambler and those who for one reason or another desire to pound down the market price when it pleases them and boost it after the crop is out of the hands of the men who did the work. Its unfair business and there should be a way to prevent it and by that we do not mean by legislation for the more laws we have, the more difficult it is to do business. The farmer has gone through several serious years and he deserves to sell his 1925 crop at a profit. If he does, times will immediately improve for that means a distribution of a large sum of money to the merchants and to the people generally. We insist that genuine good times will never be restored in America until the farmer is permitted to earn actual profits and that means he must sell his product for more money than he did ten years ago because his expenses have increased with the times, the same as yours have. It's worth thinking about. Give us your ideas.

AFTER-SWIMMING HUNGER

Roast beef and gravy and hot pie and lamb,
Chicken and noodles and sugar-cured ham
And every good thing
Of which epicures sing;
The twenty-four blackbirds dished up for a king
Aren't in it a minute with that bite you take
Just after you've come from a dip in the lake.

You may boast as you will of the dish you like best
And let it be salad or guinea hen's breast,
A tenderloin rare,
Or stewed rabbit or hare,
I'll answer there's nothing that quite can compare
With that bite of delight which you go for with vim,
That cookie or cracker just after your swim.

Ab, hunger's a sauce which no chef can provide,
No recipe book has its secret inside,
It's in no dish of Delf,
And on no pantry shelf,
It's a relish which each must provide for himself,
It's a spice without price, worth an anthem or hymn,
That everyone gets who goes in for a swim.

So I sing of no pheasant that's floating in wine,
To bread and to jam is this ditty of mine,
To cookies or cake
Which all house-keepers make,
And always have ready for hunger's sweet sake.
And I vow here and now that all food goes for with vim,
Just after a swim when you've raced to get dressed.

Ziegfeld's "Sally" At Majestic On October 7

Few, if any musical comedies which have been presented on the American stage have received so much unqualified praise and at the same time deserved it as Ziegfeld's "SALLY" the great success which comes to the Majestic, Fort Wayne, Wednesday night, October 7.
Mr. Ziegfeld is proud of this piece, and well he may be, for while it has brought him a large sum of money, it has by no means been clear profit, for even the casual observer can determine that the expense of putting on and maintaining the organization must be something enormous.

Many local people have seen "Sally" during its New York run and in Fort Wayne two years ago and they have verbally spread the information as to the charm and beauty of the production.

The piece has been embellished until it surpasses any musical comedy in American theatrical history in the way of scenery, costumes and beautiful women. And there is comedy in abundance which excites legitimate laughter and the only drawback is that there is so much to view one can scarcely grasp it all in one sitting. The But-terfly Ballet in the last act is one of the most gorgeous imaginable, its beautiful music was composed by Victor Herbert.

The book of "Sally" is by Guy Bolton; the lyrics are by Clifford Grey and the music by Jerome Kern; it was staged by Edward Royce. Seventy-five people are required for its presentation, with a special orchestra to render its tuneful song hits, while two of the largest baggage cars obtainable are required for transportation.
