

NEW PROHIBITION REGIME IN EFFECT

Enforcement On Military Business Basis Begins Under New Rule

Washington, Oct. 16.—(United Press)—Prohibition enforcement on a "military business" basis began to day when the organization of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Andrews officially took over the work of the administering the Volstead law. The organization with which Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes administered the law for four years was automatically extinguished by an order that theoretically discharged two thousand agents and clerks from the service last night, terminating the old régime.

A large number of the old forces, probably 1,500, were, however, continued in the new service through re-appointment by the 24 regional administrators in whose hands enforcement now is centered in the United States and its territorial possessions.

These administrators are solely responsible for enforcement in their respective districts and if they fail or falter, they have the word of Andrews that they will be replaced.

The mobile force of 1,800 agents was abolished with one wave of the wand. In its place Walton A. Green, chief prohibition investigator, has set up a bureau with about fifty detectives.

Decentralization has virtually abolished prohibition headquarters here. The permit section has been reduced from 117 employees to 20 and all permanent work henceforth will be handled by directors.

The publicity section under Prohibition Commissioner Roy Haynes—the section that was denounced by the research department of the Federal Council of Churches—is no longer in existence. In its place has grown a statistical department to keep track of how the organization is functioning, its expenditures and its results.

Haynes, Assistant Commissioner Jones, James J. Britt, legal counsel and Commissioner of Internal Revenue Blair continue as a prohibition board of strategy that will assist Andrews in general supervision of the work.

Quality Counts

Red Crown—A Premium Gasoline at a standard price—glides up the grade of popular favor with great ease.

Thousands of motorists have recognized the force of the "price per mile" argument and switched over to Red crown.

The price per gallon contention is weak-kneed—has no bearing.

The story is told better by what is built in the gasoline.

Of what significance is the question of a saving of a few cents on an investment of hundreds of dollars?

If you pay less for your gasoline than the price of Red Crown, you are getting less—and that is false economy raised to the nth power, no matter how it is disguised.
