Opening Grain Review

Chicago, Oct. 19.—Contrary to prevailing elements, grains dropped fractionally at the opening in the local pit today.

Almost all news on wheat tended to be bullish. Despite it, influential commission houses flooded the pit with selling orders. It was evident their confidence has been shaken. Liverpool was irregular on a quiet market.

Corn succumbed to weakness in the leading cereal. The disposition was to go slow at the steady level pending developments.

Oats held steady without any change in the undertone.

Provisions advanced a few points on cash selling.

CROWD ATTENDS DEDICATION OF SCHOOL BUILDING

Tieman spoke on Catholic education and why Catholics maintained parochial schools. He selected for his text, Christ's injunction to His apostles: "Suffer little children to come unto me—and embracing them laying His hands upon them, He blessed them"—St. Mark, X; 13.

Father Tieman said in part, "Our long-time friend, your beloved bishop, has solemnly called down God's benediction on this magnificent school. 'One of the most beautiful blessings to be found in the Roman ritual is that for the dedication of a new school. The Biblical words quoted in my text are used; they are Christ's words of many centuries ago. Amid incense and holy water, numerous prayers are pronounced, while the classrooms are the very foundations of the building are inspected. 'O Lord,' the bishop exclaimed in the words of the ancient ritual, 'bless this house, fill it with goodness, holiness, health, peace, happiness, virtue, purity, docility, kindness, obedience. At our entrance, deign to bless and sanctify this school, bless all who teach and learn and dwell therein, and everything else in it; may the angels of Thy light dwell within the walls of this school, and may they protect it now and forever.'"

"When Catholics build a school, they build a home for Christ. Catholics do not believe that Christ, our Lord and God, has only one place to lay His head. The church is not the only place Christ can enter. We believe not only in a Sunday school, but in a Monday and Tuesday school, a school for each day, for every day is the Lord's day. The God that created our soul must be kept near the soul from the moment it leaves His hands, until the moment He takes it back into His hands. Christ must be at the rearing of our cradle, Christ must be with us when we begin to toddle, Christ must sit beside us when we study, and sit beside the teachers as they teach; Christ must go out with us into the battle of life, and stand by our dying bed to crown us for the good fight we have won. Catholics believe that Christ has no reserved place in this world. This is His world, He made it. We are His people, for He has made us. This is our firm belief, and you dear people of this enlightened, progressive town have lived up to that belief. You have not faith only, but this expensive building is here to attest to all the world that you have faith's twin brother—good works."

Father Tieman paid a tribute to the Sisters of St. Agnes, who are teachers in the school, and complimented them on their splendid work and sacrifices. Bishop Noll, responding to the request of Father Seimetz, that he say a few words, arose and in his jovial way, said, "I am delighted to be your Sunday Visitor today." Bishop Noll then made a short address, saying in part, "You deserve to be most heartily congratulated upon this wonderful achievement the likeness of which you will not find even in Europe, with its centuries of educational history. This may sound strange, but there are no school buildings like this in Europe."

"The prevailing tendency throughout the country today is to foster religion and education."

Several statements in the current issue of the Literary Digest were repeated by Bishop Noll. One of these was to the effect that if religion is theology, it is out of place in the schools, it is consists in teaching the child to love God and love Christ and follow His behest it can be taught in the school room. The prelate deprecated the loose manner of thinking so prevalent in America today. How, he asked, can there be religion without theology? Theology, he said, is the "foundation of religion as far as its moral aspect is concerned. One writer stated that a person might believe as he pleases about God, but how can a person be led to love God if he believes what he likes about Him? How can I serve Him, why should I follow Christ's behest, why introduce His teachings into the school if there is no authority? What is knowledge if it is not definite, if I can believe as I please what motive power have I for action? Everything has its creed, even your lodges and societies today present their creed and keep it before the people. Our creed must be definite, clear, distinct so that my conscience may be guided by it."

Emphasizing the high value that the Decatur Catholic congregation had set upon school, Bishop Noll stated that there was an investment of $1,000 practically for every child, besides the heavy cost of maintenance.

Father Seimetz thanked Bishop Noll for coming to Decatur, extended his appreciation to the congregation for the hearty co-operation and good-will, for their spirit of sacrifice in making the erection and dedication of the new building possible. Father Seimetz received a hearty applause when Father Tieman mentioned that next year he would celebrate his silver jubilee in the priesthood.

Miss Rosemary Smith, dressed as Miss Columbia, gave a beautiful musical recitation, and Mrs. L. A. Holt-house accompanied at the piano. A silver offering was taken and approximately $300 was given by those present.

The visiting priests, who assisted at the dedicatory service, were:

Very Rev. Othmar Knapke, C. P. S., rector of St. Charles Seminary, Carthage, O.; Rev. Basil Didier, C. P. S., pastor of the Church of the Most Precious Blood, Fort Wayne; Rev. Edward Fillion, chaplain of St. Vincent's Orphan home; Rev. A. E. Lafontaine, diocesan school superintendent; Rev. Joseph F. Delaney, Rev. Charles H. Thiele, Rev. Henry Hoerstin, Rev. Robert J. Halpin, Rev. John A. Dapp, of Fort Wayne; Rev. Louis A. Tieman, of Cincinnati, O.; Rev. Michael P. Louen, Huntington; Rev. Fridolin J. Hasler, Yoder; Rev. Lawrence Eberle, Avilla; Rev. Michael J. Aichinger, New Haven; Rev. Charles Marr, Monroeville; Rev. J. Nicholas Allgeier, Besancon; Rev. Joseph Seimetz, Chesterton; Rev. Charles Girardot, Michigan City.

The stage, one of the largest in the state, was decorated in fall flowers, and in colors of red, white and blue, the American flag forming the background.
