Mrs. Palmer Feared Her Health
Was Permanently Impaired
Until Tanlac Brought Relief.

Mrs. Gladys Palmer, resident of 130 Beauty Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., lends her name to further the cause of TANLAC, the treatment which she declares has "restored the joys of good health to her."

"During the past winter," says Mrs. Palmer, "indigestion, heart palpitation, nervousness, poor appetite and loss of sleep, together with headaches, biliousness and dizziness, simply took away all the pleasure out of life. When I began taking TANLAC the color of health was fading from my face and I felt depressed and worried for fear my health was permanently impaired. But, now I haven't an ailment in the world and am just so happy to recover my health that I want to tell everyone about TANLAC."

TANLAC is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold. Tanlac Vegetable Pills for constipation, made and recommended by the manufacturers of Tanlac.

American Hospitals Still Crowded With World War Wounded

By Joseph S. Wasney
(U. P. Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Nov. 11.—(United Press)—The world war ended seven years ago but to 26,340 veterans in American hospitals the war still continues a battle for life.

A few of the former service men in the 51 Veteran Bureau Hospitals will be discharged today as cured. That event to them is a real armistice with fate. Others are winning their long fight for health, but many maimed, shell-shocked and diseased—will spend the remainder of their days being cared for by the government.

Veterans hospitals have cared for 500,736 patients since the war. Some of the first cases of disfigurement are still under treatment. At Walter Reed Hospital here "one veteran has been operated on 49 times and another 27 times. Both are preparing today to undergo several more surgical treatments.

Vocational training has fitted 109,490 ex-service men to compete in industrial activity. Rehabilitation of these veterans who suffered from the war cost the government $5,020,000.

Compensation paid to veterans and their dependents since the armistice totals $754,934,000. The government is paying an average of $12,500,000 monthly to former service men who were partially or wholly disabled and to their dependents.

Twenty-nine thousand men who fought under the American flag in the war have "passed on" since January 1. To the dependents of these heroes Uncle Sam has paid more than $9,450,000 in adjusted compensation.

The veterans who were only entitled to a cash "bonus" of $50 or less because of their short time in the service have collected $3,138,233.46 this year.

Through the establishment of a "sinking fund" the government plans to pay former service men about $7,000,000,000 in the next 20 years thru adjusted compensation.

Insanity has been the most terrible of the war's aftermath. There are now more than 12,300 world war veterans being treated for mental diseases caused mostly by shell shock and fever.

Mrs. J. H. Borroughs spent the afternoon in Fort Wayne visiting with friends.

COL MITCHELL WINS ROUND IN COURT-MARTIAL

army general staff, calling Major General C. Brant, general staff officer, to the stand.

A sensation was sprung by Brant almost at the outset of his testimony, when he declared that a report prepared by Colonel Mitchell on Hawaiian defenses in October, 1924, reached him, as a general staff member, only last Saturday, with the notation that "the recommendations were on General Mitchell's personal opinion and no consideration should be given."

Brant said the notation was put on the report by the war plans division of the staff.

Hindenburg Only War Chief Still In Post Of Active Leadership

London, Nov. 10.—(United Press)—

Seven years ago today was the supreme moment in the lives of the leaders of the warring nations. It was the climax of history's greatest drama.

Today they have retired to the wings. Their crowded hour in the spotlight is over. They are again more or less ordinary humans.

In each country correspondents of the United Press have sought out and recorded what has happened to these historical figures since the spotlight shifted from them.

Ferdinand Foch, once the commander of the greatest army the world ever saw, is trying to adapt himself to civilian life. He appears in uniform only on state occasions. Most of his days are spent at the Ecole Militaire attending to his duties as chief of the Versailles Military Commission and many of his evenings are spent playing chess with several cronies in an obscure cafe on the Left Bank.

Wilhelm Hohenzollern, once emperor of one of the world's greatest empires, continues to chop wood and read books in an effort to while away the tedium of banishment in a dull Dutch village. Today reduced to circumstances which, measured by a regal scale, amount to poverty, Wilhelm is fighting with excellent chances of success to regain Hohenzollern properties in Prussia, whose recovery would make him one of the world's richest men.

David Lloyd-George is writing articles for newspapers and planning a great "back-to-the-land" campaign designed to make England self-supporting. It is now to secret that the "Welsh Wizard" aspires to be again Premier and his Land Campaign is a part of his plan to become again leader of the British Empire.

Georges Clemenceau, called by France "the Father of Victory," is living a life almost as retired as that of the ex-Kaiser, and even more modest.

In summer he lives in a fisherman's hut on the Vendee coast, in winter in a dark, stuffy flat in Rue Franklin in Paris. He is writing a monumental philosophical work and cultivating flowers and tomatoes. His household consists of only a valet, chauffeur and an aged Vendean cook.

Von Hindenburg has emerged as the luckiest loser of the war. Torn from his high pedestal in 1918, he has now been restored to even greater eminence as President of Germany. Hindenburg devotes most of his leisure to hunting and spends long evenings "yarning" with old friends.

Joffre devotes most of his time cultivating a flower garden at his new home at Louveciennes, near Paris, which he built according to his own designs and which is unlike any in the region. "Papa" Joffre maintains an office at the War College and sometimes gives lectures, but is practically retired.

Grand Duke Nicholas Nicolaevitch, ex-commander in chief of Russia's armies, is now an exile, at Chateau Choigny near Paris. He has not stepped beyond its great iron gates for two years. But behind the iron gates Nicholas is planning the new political and military campaign whereby the "emigre" Russians hope to overthrow the Soviet regime. Nicholas is almost destitute. His great personal fortune and Crimean estates are lost to him.

The ex-Crown Prince of Germany is living the leisured life of a country gentleman at Oels, Prussia, enjoying the pleasures and luxuries of pre-war days without the burdensome obligations of military service.

Field Marshall Haig is perhaps the only great soldier who has devoted himself to looking after the interests of his ex-soldiers after the war. Haig spends his time working, raising money, and aiding disabled ex-officers and men, widows and orphans.

Ludendorff went into politics but like his military enterprises his ventures terminated in fiascos. He is now quiescent. Von Tirpitz, of U-boat fame, was more successful in politics, and is now engaged in helping to lead the Nationalist party.

Beatty is First Sea Lord and was recently in the spotlight as a "Big Navy" advocate in the struggle with those demanding "less navy and more economy."

Mercy Murder Case To Reach Jury's Hands Soon

By Stanley Whitaker
(U. P. Staff Correspondent)

Littleton, Col., Nov. 11.—(United Press)—The right to take human life for "mercy's sake," even though that life is enclosed in a misshapen body, powerless to control muscles and with an imbecile mind, will be argued by attorneys here this afternoon and then be placed in the hands of 12 jurymen to decide.

With closing arguments scheduled for today, the trial of Dr. Harold E. Hazer, aged country physician, who killed his imbecile daughter, Hazel, to end her suffering and then attempted suicide, drew rapidly to a close.

Attempting To Identify Man Who Shot Himself

Indianapolis, Nov. 11.—Local officials today were making a determined effort to establish the identity of a man who shot himself to death in a hotel here, last week.

Since the time of the death the body has been in a local morgue awaiting identification.
