

"GOOD CHEER" TO BE MISSING

Officials To Sharpen Teeth Of Bone Dry Law Dur- ing The Holidays

Indianapolis, Nov. 12. — (United Press)—The holiday cheer will not flow so freely in Indiana this year, and there will be many a Thanksgiving table from which the old familiar bottle with the once well-known and now almost forgotten label will be missing. The teeth in the Wright Bone Dry law need sharpening state officials say, and they also add that this holiday season is going to furnish the grind stone for the sharpening process. The tiding of "good cheer" that has resounded in Indiana since time immemorial are not to resound so loudly this year the dry agents say. One of the reasons for this is that the price of liquor has gone up—it is now almost out of sight and only the extremely rich can buy—and in addition there is no longer any "good" liquor in the state. Take the word of Ansel R. Harris, deputy administrator of prohibition in Indiana for these facts. Also, Harris says, the days of the mellow old scotch, Three Roses, Haag and Haag, and all true bottled in bond whiskey is gone. It has given way to a day of phoney labels, colored alcohol, and whiskey distilled by the use of lye, ether, and denatured alcohol. Not only this day but the day when judges were inclined to smile and pass leniently in cases involving the drinking of liquor in the homes is gone. That day passed on April 29 when the Wright Bone Dry Law went into effect, teeth and all. Harris says that the law, probably the most "cussed and discussed" in the United States is a mighty fine one and "it has brought mighty fine results."

The supply is to be stopped at once, Harris said and pointed out that all border towns are being watched to see that none is imported. "It's too risky," said one bootlegger, when asked concerning the chances of getting a little "eye opener" about the last of the month. A table of prices "quoted by the best bootleggers" shows liquor prices have advanced sharply, and for two reasons, the supply is limited and the risk is great. Here is a comparative price list: Mule—Today $4.50 to $5.50 per quart; May $4; Wine—today, $4 to $5 quart, May $3.50; "Gut" Alcohol, today, $3 per pint; May, $1.25; Scotch Whiskey, today $12 a quart; May $8; Red Whiskey, today, no price quoted because of scarcity; May $14 to $15 a quart; Synthetic gin, today $6 to $7 a quart; May $5 to $6; Grain Alcohol, today $3 per pint; May, $2.50.

Complete Hope Chest Will Be Given Away

A walnut, cedar lined, console chest filled with hope chest linens, will be given away at the bazaar to be held in the Catholic school auditorium, Thanksgiving week. The chest contains a luncheon set in Italian cut work, with table and buffet runners to match, bed linens, a variety of towels, comforter, woolen blankets, card table covers and everything to make a hope chest complete. The hope chest is being furnished by the members of the St. Agnes Sodality of the Catholic parish and will be displayed in the Boston Store window, Friday, Saturday and Sunday of this week. It will be awarded Saturday night, November 28, at the school.

Seymour — This city is getting ready for Christmas in plenty of time. The Business Men's Association has appointed Miss Edna B. Smith to arrange a Christmas Eve program.

Tipton — The county clerk here has been swamped with requests for hunting licenses since the quail season has opened.
