Save the beets. Its the biggest job we have just now and we don't mean maybe. And if they are saved they must be taken out of the ground during the next ten days.

Red Cross week and your dues are due. Who wouldn't pay a dollar for such a cause? This organization, world wide, well managed and whose sole purpose is to relieve suffering during times of need, deserves your financial as well as your moral support. This is the greatest country in the world and this one of the greatest of all causes—we help each other.

This is "Father and Son Day" and what could be more important? You ought to be good friends, the very best and closest, you ought to tell each other your troubles and your secrets, you love each other so why not say so? In the various churches this evening the "dads" and their boys will banquet and enjoy programs specially arranged. Its a fine and worthy movement.

The weather man promises "fair and warmer" for the next few days. Remember the importance of saving the beet crop in this and nearby counties. At Defiance, Ohio, the school children who can be of assistance have been excused for that purpose. Similar action has been taken in various parts of Michigan and Ohio. We should save the beets even if it takes some extra effort and inconvenience us some in other ways.

Decatur needs a hundred homes and we believe they will be built during the next year. Contractors, loan associations, lumber companies and tradesmen will co-operate to assist you in building or buying a home. It will make this a better city and the next year a good business era for the community. If you are thinking of building now is your opportunity. If you believe in aiding the cause become a member of a loan association and actually help in this growth.

Van Wert county commissioners and representatives of the Ohio State highway commission have reached an agreement for a fifty-mile road improvement which includes the hard surfacing of the Van Wert to Decatur road, 109, as far east as the state line. The entire program will cost the county $75,000 and the state $125,000, it is estimated. The road will join at the county line with the proposed road from Huntington east through here and will form a portion of the Ben Franklin highway.

Hon. Hugh Daugherty, vice-president of the Fletcher Savings and Trust company, of Indianapolis, for the past dozen years, and prior to that the president of the Studabaker Bank at Bluffton, died yesterday, following a stroke of paralysis. He was eighty-two years of age and until recently was recognized as one of the leading bankers and citizens of the state. He was active in democratic politics in his day and was considered seriously as a candidate for governor and other high offices.

Unanimously chosen by the board of directors as president of the Old Adams County bank, John W. Tyndall has accepted that responsibility and will assume the duties actively tomorrow morning. Few people in Adams county have so wide an acquaintance or hold the confidence of the people more than does Mr. Tyndall.

He has served in public office with credit and honor, has proven his business ability by years of success, is self made and delights in serving. He will, it is believed, prove a worthy successor to the late Charles S. Niblick whose long years of service had made him almost a fixture of the bank. Mr. Tyndall will devote his entire time to the interests of the bank and his mature judgment combined with his experience in business and as a member of the board of directors, qualify him for the important place.

The slavish devotion which our courts pay to technicalities, regardless of the effort on the cause of justice, is a frequent subject of comment. The latest illustration, reported from Washington, seems to be the limit, if the details as given are correct. A prisoner was tried on the charge of assault with a deadly weapon. When the jury returned from its deliberations, the foreman, by a slip of the tongue, announced its verdict as "not guilty," although it had found the defendant guilty. The judge was informed of the mistake and the jury, on being polled, declared it was for conviction, but the court decided the original announcement should stand and the prisoner was given his freedom. The layman will ask what is the use of polling a jury after announcement of its verdict if the result of this checking-up process is to be disregarded. A law journal recently recorded the freeing of a defendant, charged with stealing a pair of boots, because his attorney was able to show that the boots were not a pair, but two "lefts." Its comment was that an English judge would have corrected the indictment with a stroke of his pen and ordered that the trial proceed. Many instances of a similar use of technicalities to defeat the ends of justice could be cited. There has even been a case where omission of the word "the" from an indictment was held to render it invalid. Sometimes it is difficult to accept the English jurist's dictum that "the law is the sublimation of common sense."—Marion Chronicle.

A SAD CASE

I'm sorry for my banker. If his "My boy," he slowly whimpered, and I shuddered at his groans, "I've done nothing all this morning but deny requests for loans." Then his tears upon the carpet fell like raindrops on a lake. "I begged him to excuse me, for I thought his heart would break."

His pleasant face turned solemn and his eyes filled up with tears. His voice seemed strangely plaintive as it fell upon my ears. He started in to tell me of the many loans he'd made. And he sobbed upon my shoulder: "They will never be repaid."

Luther Boyers Elected To Honorary Society

The San Francisco Chronicle of San Francisco, California, bearing date of October 28, states: "High honors were accorded fifty University of California science students and four of its professors yesterday with their election to Sigma Xi national scientific society. "The election to the honorary society was based upon high scholastic records, together with progress and enterprise shown by candidates in research work in scientific fields. Sigma Xi is regarded as holding the same prestige in the scientific world as Phi Beta Kappa does in the field of letters and art."

Among those elected—and without his knowledge—was Luther M. Boyers, B.A., M.D., of Berkeley, California, where the University of California is located.

Service the Foundation of Profit

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) states, without hesitation, that it is in business and is organized to make a profit.

It believes that no apology for profit making is necessary—that profit making is as serviceable to the consumers of its products as it is to the stockholders.

Profits are the result of needed service—efficiently supplied. Without profits, service is impossible.

Out of its profits, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) finances its increased facilities for service. Out of these profits it extends its service and builds for ampler and fuller service in the future. Out of profits it pays its 50,000 stockholders for the use of their money.

Standard Oil Company (Indiana) storage and service stations, spread over the length and breadth of the Middle West, are expressive evidences of service.

Into the farming regions of the west, service carried Standard Oil Company (Indiana) tanks and tank wagons, in advance of settlement. This service was of inestimable value to men struggling to force the land to produce and in the end has been profitable to the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

Every expansion of this Company—bulk storage stations—modern refineries—scientific and technical equipment—all are essential service factors and all are made possible by profits through service.

Every one will admit that oil has been an essential factor in the development of the Middle West. Motorists, farmers, business men—in fact, every one—will acknowledge, that the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has been a major factor in bringing oil products to automobiles, to factories, to farms, to homes, with a guarantee of dependability and of quality.

To render this essential service would have been utterly impossible except for the ability of the Management to conduct the affairs of this Company so that profits could be returned to the stockholders.

Profits are the inducement for capital to invest. The ability to create profits has enabled the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) to attract the capital necessary for its expansion.

This Company has proved in its long experience, that economies of production and distribution can be achieved only through a heavy investment of capital and a highly perfected organization, working with enthusiasm and sustained energy.
