

DEMOCRATS SEE VICTORY AHEAD

Many Men Anxious to Make Race For Senatorial Nomination Next May

Indianapolis, Nov. 30.—(United Press)—With more men anxious to make the race for the Senatorial nomination than at any time in the history of the state, Indiana Democratic leaders today were making the usual boasts of victory for the election next fall.

Party leaders claim to see in the number of candidates seeking the nomination a sure sign of victory.

The fact that Republican leaders are making the same claims does not dampen the spirits of the Jeffersonians in the least.

At Democratic headquarters the names of more than a dozen prominent state Democrats are being discussed for the nomination.

The man for whom there seems to be the greatest demand is Frederick Van Nuyts, law partner of the late Samuel M. Ralston, and regarded as one of the state's most brilliant orators.

Van Nuyts has refused to say that he will seek the office but his friends are determined that he shall make the race, it was said.

Judge Hertes Clements, of Posey county, is another man who is being considered for the office. Van Nuyts, if he runs, will seek the long term now held by Senator James E. Watson while Clements will ask the short term for which Arthur Robinson was appointed.

Dr. Carleton B. McCulloch, twice Democratic candidate for governor, also is being groomed for the race although he declares he does not want the office.

If McCulloch's friends succeed in getting him entered in the marathon of votes he will seek Robinson's toga, it was said.

Joseph Cravens of Madison, long one of the outstanding figures in state politics may make the race. Leaders say that to date he is undecided but is considering trying his luck against Robinson.

Lincoln Dixon, Craven's friends and one of his strongest allies is being boosted for the Watson toga.

The North Vernon man has hundreds of friends not only in his own district, but all over the state, and a long and brilliant record as representative from the Fourth District.

There seems to be little doubt that his hat will be tossed into the ring before many weeks roll away in 1926.

Democrats in the neighborhood of Lafayette are strong for Dan Sims, who made the race for the nomination against Ralston in 1922.

Sims will ask for the short term nomination if he decides to pit his strength against the other Democrats in the primary fight.

Other men prominently mentioned for the primary race are, Walter Myers Indianapolis, short term; Albert Stump Indianapolis, short term; L. Ert Slack, Indianapolis, short term; Walter Chamber, Newcastle, Democratic state chairman, long term; Evans Woollen, Indianapolis, short term; Henry A. Barnhart, Rochester, long term; and John A. M. Adair, Portland, long term.

While there has been little discussion of Congressional candidates around state headquarters it is believed that Chester Montgomery, of South Bend, recently elected mayor of that city, will seek the nomination in the Thirteenth District.

Should Arthur Greenwood refuse to run for re-election in the second district, it is understood that friends of George Purcell, Vincennes editor, will urge him to enter the battle. If Greenwood asks another term Purcell probably will not enter the field.

Zach Dungan, clerk of the state supreme court, and the only Democrat in the state house, is being groomed for the race in the Eleventh district.

Harry Canfield, in the fourth and Frank Gardner in the third will be candidates for re-election.

The political ball will start rolling shortly after the first of the year when a series of district rallies will be held.
