MORE ECONOMY IS NECESSARY SAYS COOLIDGE

the virtues of further economizing, bearing home to Congress that by tax reduction the benefits of governmental frugality were being communicated to the people.

"The outlook for 1926 and 1927 shows clearly that the united effort of the executive and the legislative branches of the government for economy in federal economy is further bearing fruit," he said.

"In the last four years, there have been two substantial reductions in taxes. We have restored to the people a part of the moneys which we required of them to finance the World War. We are now in that favorable position of making further restoration.

"The Ways and Means committee has been informed of our prospective surplus for 1927. That committee has prepared a tax reduction measure. While this measure somewhat exceeds my judgment in amount and in exemptions, yet with continuing pressure for economy in the federal service, and the stimulation to business which will result from tax reduction, perhaps we can make further reduction in taxes of about the sum total of our prospective surplus for 1927, without jeopardizing the balancing of our annual budget.

"Such reduction, however, should carry an obligation not to embark upon new projects involving large annual expenditures if we are to safeguard the integrity of our budget."

After commending the committee for the non-partisan spirit in which it framed the new tax bill, and expressing the hope that its progress through Congress would be attended by the same spirit, the President set forth the estimated appropriations required to run the government for the fiscal year of 1927 and compared them with actual appropriations for the present fiscal year.

Increased appropriations are asked for the legislative establishment, Veterans Bureau, other independent offices, departments of agriculture, commerce, justice, navy, state, and treasury, post office, and for retirement of the public debt principal. Decreases are made in the appro-prations of the executive office, shipping board, departments of interior, labor and war, and for interest on the public debt.
