OBITUARY

Fauntabelle Mae Conrad, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Conrad, was born February 20, 1925 and passed to the beautiful beyond, to the land over there, December 8, 1925, aged 9 months and 18 days. She leaves to mourn her departure, the father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Conrad, of Decatur, Ind.; one sister, Mrs. Lucille Earhart, of Northville, Mich.; the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Sherwood, of Woodstalk, Ohio; one nephew, Alford Celestial Earhart, of Northville, Mich.; one uncle, Jason Sherwood, of Marengo, Ohio; one uncle, Kirby Conrad, of Lancaster, Ohio; and two aunts, Mrs. Naomi Eadon and Miss Ruth Sherwood, of Rodgers, Ark., and many loving friends. Short services with prayer were held at the home by Rev. Covert and the body was taken to the home of her grandparents, at Woodstalk, Ohio, by motor, where services and beautiful songs were held by Rev. and Mrs. Emminger and burial was in the beautiful cemetery of Woodstalk.

Little empty cradle, treasured now with care,
Though the precious burden, it has fled;

How we miss the locks of curly golden hair
Peeping from the tiny, snow-white bed.

When the dimpled cheek and little laughing eyes
From the rumpled pillow shone,

Then I gazed with gladness, now I look and sigh—

Empty is the cradle, baby's gone.

Baby left her cradle for the golden shore,
O'er the silvery waters she has flown,

Gone to join the angels, peaceful evermore—
Empty is the cradle, bay's gone.

Near a shady valley stands a grassy mound,
Underneath, my little darling sleeps;

Blossoms sweet and roses cluster all around,
Overhead the willow silent weeps.

There I laid my loved one in the long ago,
And my heart doth sadly moan.

Though she's with the angels, still I faint would weep—
Empty is the cradle, baby's gone.

State Is Rich in Marl And Limestone

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 15.—(Special)—Ground limestone and marl have come into increased demand for agricultural purposes in Indiana in recent years, and the state is rich in these natural resources, Dr. W. N. Logan, state geologist under the conservation department, points out.

It is pretty generally understood that these substances are used for the purpose of neutralizing acids in soils, and to further improve the texture of heavy soils. Free acids in soils detrimental to the growth of general farm crops, and many soil areas require the addition of some form of lime before leguminous crops can be grown.

In southern Indiana very little marl exists, says Dr. Logan, but thick ledges of limestone outcrops over a large part of the central portion of the area. This limestone may be crushed and used in the powdered form.

While the outcrops of limestone are not so abundant in northern Indiana because of the covering of glacial drift, there are extensive deposits of marl connected with the lakes of that region. Marl is found also in some marsh areas, along the courses of some streams, and in the filled basins of extinct lakes.

The marl occurs, the report states, in beds varying in thickness from a few feet to forty feet, and occupies areas varying in size from a few acres to one thousand acres. Marl is found beneath the waters of the lakes, along the shores, under deposits of muck and peat in marshes, and in the filled basins of extinct lakes or arms of lakes. These Indiana marls consist principally of calcium carbonate and magnesium with much smaller amounts of clay, sand, and organic matter. "The Handbook of Indiana Geology," prepared under direction of Dr. Logan, and the annual report for 1900, contain complete discussions of Indiana marl.

L. D. Brown, of west of the city, was a business visitor here this afternoon.

Why not attend the dance after the Box Social at the old Gym, Wednesday evening, at 9 o'clock? "The Night Owls" will syncopate for 35c per couple, or 25c single admission.
