Many Big Ten Stars To Be Back Next Year

By Edward C. Derr
(U. P. Staff Correspondent)
Chicago, Dec. 18.—(United Press)—Before another summer fades into autumn and the brisk winds of October sweep the college campus, there probably will be many changes in the prospects but if they are not too severe, there is going to be some mighty good football played in the Big Ten Conference next year.

College athletes have a habit of leaving school at the most unexpected and inopportune moment and they have an uncanny lack of failing in their studies and thus becoming ineligible for their teams.

Many a football coach has been given added gray hairs by having an athlete around whom he hopes to build a winning team leave school to sell insurance or else flunk out by his failure to master Greek, chemistry, or the intricacies of "Business Administration."

But unless these two reapers take too large a toll, most of the Big Ten coaches are going to have plenty of seasoned veterans in their lineups next year. Fewer gridiron athletes graduate from college this year than at any time in recent years.

Minnesota is a striking example. When "Doc" Spears took up his job of coaching the Gopher team he found difficulty in teaching the Minnesota veterans his style of play. And so, as the season wore on with indifferent results, Spears sent most of the seniors center, and two regular ends, Seidel to the bench and put a team of sophomores in the game. They played the way Spears taught them and brought better results.

Next year, and the year after, Spears is going to have a squad of players that knows how to play as he wants them to play and Minnesota is looked upon by the other schools in the conference as one that is quite likely to have something to say about the championship.

Northwestern, which finished in a tie for second place this season, is another that is likely to cause trouble in the conference in 1926. Coach Thistlewaite loses Tim Lowry, the brilliant and Matthews, but the rest of his line and all of his backfield except a substitute quarterback, will be back on the squad next September—unless those reapers work overtime. The Wildcats should make a great showing next year with Lewis, Baker, White, Gustafson and Schumaker in the backfield.

Michigan will have its ace, Benny Friedman, back next year as captain and will have Molenda, Oosterbaan, Gilbert and several others who played conspicuous parts in this year's successful season around which to build another great team. It will be a tough job to dethrone the team that is reigning champion of the conference.

Iowa will have its Nick Kutsch for two more years, Ohio State will have its Marek for the same length of time, and Wisconsin, Indiana and Purdue all will have large numbers of regulars back in the lineups next year.

Illinois doesn't lose much in numbers but it loses so much in quality that Coach Zuppke will have a mighty big job on his hands next year. Red Grange and Earl Britton, the man who opened most of the holes through which Red sprinted to touchdowns, both played their last collegiate games at Columbus and it will take an entire backfield of better than average players to make up for this loss.

Coach Stagg, Chicago's "grand old man," was the unluckiest of all, however. He lost an entire line and all but three of his backfield men. He had two complete sets of backs and lost five of them—Kernwein, McCarthy, Curley, Timme and Francis. He has left only Marks, Drain, and Rouse.

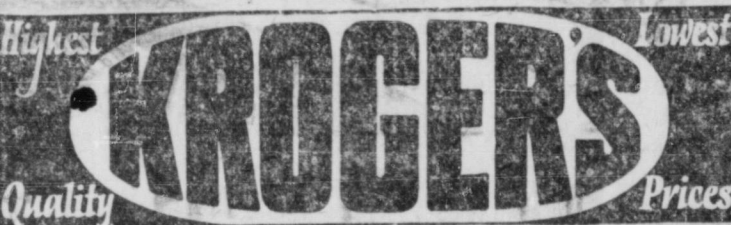

And so, with the exception of Illinois and Chicago, all of the teams in the Big Ten should be stronger next year. It is a tough trick of fate for the prestige of middle western football that these two teams will represent the Big Ten in most of the big inter-sectional games next year, Chicago meeting Penn and Dartmouth and Illinois engaging Penn.
