JOHN B. STOLL:—

John B. Stoll for more than a half century was identified with the press of Indiana. It is well within the facts to say that during a considerable part of that period he was an outstanding figure in his calling. His death at South Bend last night at the age of eighty-three removes a man with a high conception of public duty, more than ordinary ability to express himself clearly and fearlessly, and seemingly of tireless energy. It was typical of Mr. Stoll that, after he had retired in 1911 from the editorship and control of the South Bend Times, he could not resist a desire to maintain his contact with journalism as a contributor. He had continued work of this character until shortly before his death.

In politics Mr. Stoll was a Democrat, and his advice long was sought by party leaders. There was, however, little of the opportunist in his makeup, and his suggestions and plans looked toward the public welfare rather than any immediate gain in offices won. There can be no finer contribution to public life than that. Mr. Stoll, who was born in Germany and whose father was drowned shortly before his birth, was reared by his mother, who emigrated to the United States. He had a real love for this country and the principles on which the government rested. That faith was unflinching and was reflected in an admirable manner in his career as editor and publisher. He was connected with newspaper work from the age of nine years on. Few have had the span of press service that he had.

How interested Mr. Stoll continued to be in life about him is indicated by his activity as a member of the State Prison board. He became ill with influenza last Sunday after his return from a trip to Michigan City to attend a meeting of that body. In truth he did not rust out but wore out, after eighty-three years. Indiana is the loser by his passing, but the state, with his relatives and friends, will share the pride felt in a career that was inspiring and useful.—Indianapolis News.

Texas friends proposed that Edward M. House shall have the democratic nomination for president, but nothing is likely to come from it. The colonel is a competent politician, while he was picking governors for Texas they were first-class governors and see what a mess Texas has made of it since House entered the larger field! The colonel is a progressive in the Wilson sense. The colonel demonstrated his loyalty to President Wilson, by remaining his unselfish advisor after Wilson had cut the tie that bound. The colonel has the friendship of liberal statesmen in England, France and Germany. In fact he has an unusual quality for friendships. But his power in political life has always been unofficial. He has been shrewd to see that it was the greater power because it was unofficial. The field of his most patient and useful service has been international, a field in which American politicians, including delegates to conventions and congressmen, have little interest. The colonel does not at all fit into the picture of a demagogue presidential candidate. His whole political experience has been such as to win him the confidence of men in high places, but not to make him a candidate for office.—Syracuse Post-Standard.

A few days like this and everybody will be catching the "Clean up and paint up" fever. It comes regularly with spring and its a good thing for it rids us of a lot of dirt, rubbish, ugly spots and makes everybody feel better. You know there's a lot in appearances. If you go into a drab appearing room you soon feel that way yourself and the same thing is true of a city. If you enter a town where the streets are ill kept and where the store fronts are dead looking and the homes and lawns and approaches look dilapidated, you know its a bum place to light. It doesn't make any difference what your creed, race, prejudices or politics is, here's one movement you can join in to your advantage. Don't forget to help clean up.

Got a dog? Beginning the 15th of the month, if he is running out and doesn't wear a muzzle, it will be the duty of the police officers to shoot him. The order, which has just officially gone out from the state board of health and is effective for ninety days, was made necessary because of the widespread of rabies. It is claimed there are more cases in the state now than was ever known and many people who have been bitten are being treated in the Pasteur Indianapolis hospital. The order should be complied with for if it is not and some person is bitten the results may be very serious. Muzzle the dog or keep him in the yard.

Brighten up the store fronts, trim the windows, light 'em up, use a little paint, get ready for spring. Though the predictions have been that we are not to have any spring or summer, we wouldn't advise you to go on that theory for unless different than its been the past several thousand years, the season will be very similar to those of other years.

THE ROUNDED LIFE

When you have done with your business and ended your battle for gain,
When you have come to your glory and gathered the price of your pain,
What have you captured that's lasting more than the love of your own,
The love of your wife and your children, the love of the friends you have known?
Give heed to the life you are building, for in truth 'tis a life that you build;
Is it a temple of gladness, with pictures and memories filled,
Or is it a sepulchre ghastly, a tomb that is silent and cold,
With nothing to warm you or cheer you but columns of silver and gold?
You were born to be strong, to be happy, to laugh and to sing through the years;
You were born to know life in its fullness, with all of its heart-aches and tears;
You were born to know roses and blossoms and the numberless pleasures of earth;
So stunt not your life as the miser, who reckons in money his worth,
For when age shall descend with its shadows and the end of the battle is seen,
You will find the brave heart and the gentle as rich as the richest has been.
For his life shall be blended with beauty, he shall treasure of memory own,
While the slave to his millions of dollars shall sit at his desk all alone.
Take time for the pleasure of living, take time to be friendly and kind;
Be more than a maker of money, grow richer in heart and in mind;
Be a glorious comrade and neighbor, know the meaning of laughter and tears;
Live bravely and gladly and fully, and you will not have wasted the years.
