ITS GOOD BUSINESS:—

Eliminating all esthetic consideration and art pleas, any movement to enhance the attractiveness of a city is a business proposition of no small concern. Municipal beauty pays. Every property owner, no matter in what section of the city he may live, is benefited by improvements that are made in his community. Business shares indirectly in the betterments, for they advertise a city as effectively as do many other projects.

A city whose homes uniformly are kept in a good condition recommends itself to the attention of the stranger. Every dirty and dilapidated bit of environment detracts from the general effect the tidiness and neatness. It mars the whole picture.

The appearance of an entire city block is ruined by one house with an unkempt premise, littered with paper and rubbish, and advertising the owner's unconcern about civic tidiness. Attractive streets are to be found where all the property owners have developed the idea of civic responsibility for neatness to such a point that the whole row of houses shows it.

Some of the owners of untidy premises fail to see the financial advantages of cleanliness. They do not know that neglect of this kind detracts from the value of their homes. An attractive neighborhood means additional profits to them if they try to dispose of their property.

If every part of the city presents a neat and clean appearance, the whole community will have a pleasing aspect. Two or three beautiful streets do not make a beautiful city. They merely stand out in contrast to the unattractive streets. All the streets and all the sections of a city must conform with a standard of tidiness and neatness if the whole municipality is to be regarded as a beautiful one.—Richmond Palladium.

In a number of nearby counties plans are complete to carry out the orders from the state board of health to kill all dogs found running loose and unmuzzled. The order from the state department calls attention to the fact that 123 people have been and are being treated at the Pasteur laboratory for rabies and that the disease has been increasing for seven months. It has spread even to live stock and in cattle is similar to the old foot and mouth disease. Police officers, sheriffs and marshalls are instructed to kill all dogs found running at large without being muzzled or under control and the order is effective ninety days.

Now the republican candidates for the senatorial nomination have something to work on any way. Both Senators Watson and Robinson have made public speeches and during the next week their opponents can have all kinds of fun tearing to pieces their arguments of why they should be in while so many "deserving" aspirants are out.

Bob Tucker says its a ten to one bet that Senator Watson will be nominated over Clarice Adams, but perhaps Bob hasn't been away from the Columbia club very far the past couple of weeks. While the odds should be in favor of the Indiana political boss who is backed by the machine, they will probably be surprised at the vote Mr. Adams receives. It looks from this view more like a three to two proposition than a ten to one.

Edward W. Browning, millionaire realtor of New York has adopted another little girl, securing more publicity. He married "Peaches" Heenan, are fifteen yesterday. They may call him a philanthropist, a benefactor or what ever they wish, but to us he appears like a silly old fool, who is seeking trouble. He'll probably find it too.

Mrs. Lew Shank is for Watson and her spouse, the former mayor of Indianapolis is strong for Adams. It is said the arguments can be heard far down the block and so far away about even. It will probably not be decided until the May 4th primary and some times in these family disagreements there are hangovers.

Banditry is a business. Fifteen prisoners escaped from a Nashville prison Saturday and while the officers were in pursuit of them, they stopped long enough to burglarize a bank of $15,000, thus financing themselves for a try to any foreign port they can reach.

Frenchmen are shocked to learn they must swear to their income tax reports, declare messages from over there. That's nothing, Frenchy, over here millions have sworn at 'em for several years but it doesn't stop payments.

Perhaps it will soon be necessary to require all the candidates for sheriff and the police force to pass an exam on dog killing. That seems to be one of the important duties just now in Indiana.

Well, any way we had a touch of spring and while it lasted only a day, it brought forth a lot of rakes and hoes and spades and other tools, indicating that we are just waiting for a chance at the yards and gardens.

Gary will get a lot of free publicity out of the malt tonic cases even if they don't get to use all the one thousand cases of the "medicine." It pays to be enterprising.

Just Folks by Edgar A. Guest

MARBLES AND MONEY
Ed and John were little boys in the long ago. Hadn't more than fifty mibs, blues and whites and reds. Playing marbles day by day, just like boys you know. "John," said Ed one day to him, still on marbles bent. Ed was clever, so was John. Ed one difference bore. "I've a thousand in my sacks, but I'm not content. Just how many now have you?" Answered John, "A few. Fifty marbles, I should say, but I've more than you."

John played marbles now and then, never lost them all; Had enough to join the game when the boys would call. "More than 17" said Ed, surprised, "surely that can't be!" "Yes," said John, "I've more than you—I've all I want, you see."

John played at baseball, climbed the trees, loved the birds and knew Many a thrill of doing things Ed would never do. Rich man, piling wealth on wealth, catch John's point of view! Who has all he wants today is richer far than you.

Treasurer Of Marion County Has A Larger Income Than President

Indianapolis, Ind., April 12.—State-wide interest is being aroused by the action of democratic members of the city council in seeking an investigation of the handling of Barrett law funds in Marion county.
The democratic councilmen are seeking an accounting of interest on the city's share of Barrett law money on deposit with the county treasurer. They assert that through application of the law the Marion county treasurer receives a larger annual income than the president of the United States.
The fight against permitting interest to be paid from the funds to go to the county treasurer is based on a law
