Interlocking Attractions At Fair
The mechanical city is one of the most interesting attractions at the Northern Indiana Fair this week. This is said to be the original mechanical city and has been exhibited in all parts of the world. It was made in a foreign country and each part was whittled out with a pocket knife. Another interesting attraction on the fairground is an exhibit of two freak dogs. One old dog and one pup on exhibit have no front legs. Their mother and father are registered dogs and normal in every way.

Plaids of hair and even complete wigs elaborately dressed are being suggested for the evening use of women whose hair is bobbed or shingled.

Writing Ink Output Slowly Decreasing

Washington, D. C. Sept. 2.—(United Press).—Production of ink for writing has not increased in recent years. Officials are undecided whether to attribute this to increased use of the typewriter or to speeding up of American life to a point where telephones or telegrams are used for many communications.

Writing ink production last year was $4,405,715 in the 28 principal factories, which made other products to make a total output of $6,084,295, which is more than $30,000 under the 1923 mark. In the same period, the number of establishments with a $5,000 a year production decreased by three.

and tonight. The midway was practically dry by noon, and a few rays of sunshine, at intervals, gave evidence of better weather today and the rest of the week.

About 500 persons braved the threatening weather early Thursday morning and were on hand when the gates opened. Many late arrivals, it was predicted, would swell the crowd in the afternoon, when the race program opened.

Exhibits Worth Seeing
The exhibits this year are arranged in the same locations that they were last year, and they are unusually fine and worth seeing. The Agricultural exhibit, contains vegetables and grains grown in Adams county and is of especial interest to the farmers.

The art, horticultural, cattle and horse shows are larger than usual this year and are well worth the time of visiting them. Concessions and shows of all sorts are thrown together to make one of the longest midways the local fair has ever had.

May Continue Over Labor Day
The show is clean throughout, and the stand managers are an optimistic bunch of people, always happy and always hoping for good weather. Many of the concessioners are urging the fair management to continue the fair over Labor Day. It is probable that this will be done, but Mr. Williamson stated that he would not permit a Labor Day fair until later.

In case the fair holds over until Labor Day, there would be a free Sunday fair and possibly a band concert. Monday would be derby day, and each day's race program would be advanced a day.

A definite announcement concerning the remainder of the fair will be made tomorrow, the management stated.

One of Britain's greatest surgeons is Professor Louise McLeroy, who is also professor of surgery in one of the important medical schools.

Lake Again Recedes To Prove Old Story Of Immigrants Of 1849

Lakeview, Ore., (United Press).—As the waters parted in the Red Sea to allow the children of Israel to reach the land of "milk and honey," so did they recede at Goose Lake, Oregon, to allow the seekers of gold, in the days following the rush of '49, enroute in emigrant trains, to pass over its smooth bed.

It was Indians, not Egyptians the emigrants sought to elude. The story of how they outwitted the Indians by jutting away from a stretch of the lake bed, was told by the settlers themselves but doubted.

It was in the same section that a band of Piutes and Modocs lay ambushed in the lava beds of a few months afterward and massacred a contingent at Bloody Point. Scores, including women, were killed.

Recently the emigrants' story has received belated confirmation. The waters of the lake again receded and where the lake once nestled a scant sheet of not more than five miles of water remains.

With the old floor of the lake exposed, traces of the rutted wheel tracks made by the wagons and ox-carts remained, a silent legend of the romance of three-quarters of a century ago.
