DEATH TOLL IN FLORIDA ESTIMATED AT 400 TO 750

ing the dead, caring for the injured—estimated to total 4,000—and feeding the 50,000 people who have been left at least temporarily homeless.

Bread lines formed in those Florida towns which only last winter drew worldwide attention because of their unprecedented prosperity.

Red Cross stations were set up where bread tickets were given to the needy.

The first relief train reached Miami during the morning with surgeons, nurses, two car-loads of water, and quantities of hospital equipment and medical supplies.

Troops In Command

Police, national guardsmen and volunteers took control of the situation and maintained virtual martial law in Hollywood, Fort Lauderdale, Miami, while in other towns such as Dania, Homestead, Coral Gables, Miami Shores, Sebring, Moorehaven and Clewiston local organizations were in charge.

Refugees arrived throughout the day at West Palm Beach, apparently the nearest city to escape undamaged. They told of dead lying in the streets of Miami, Clewiston, and other towns, of water shortages becoming serious, of the fear of disease intensified by the danger of a serious food shortage.

A field hospital has been established at Sebring, Florida, where more than 50 dead and many injured have been brought.

Hospitals throughout the area were inadequate to care for the injured and those who could be moved were taken to private homes and prepared for removal to other cities when transportation is restored.

West Palm Beach, Fla., Sept. 20.—

(United Press.)—Caring for the injured, collecting the dead, and feeding the homeless occupied the entire attention of South Florida today following the tropical hurricane which laid waste a 70-mile area from 35 miles below Miami to Fort Lauderdale.

Deaths in the stricken area may not number more than 400, although estimates at this time run much higher.

Injured lists range from 3,000 to 10,000.

Reports from Sebring, where a temporary field hospital and morgue have been established, said the bodies of 51 men, women and children who were drowned when the dam holding Lake Okeechobee collapsed had been recovered at Moorehaven.

Autoists report bodies strewn along the road from Moorehaven to Clewiston.

Property damage in the stricken area is expected to total $200,000,000. More than $1,000,000 worth of automobiles were destroyed in Miami alone.

Miami, Hollywood, Miami Beach and Fort Lauderdale were hardest hit.

All night, trucks carrying rough boxes and food ploughed through the debris-strewn road from West Palm Beach to Hollywood. All other vehicles except those on official business were turned back.

Troops with fixed bayonets patrol the roads every few hundred yards. It is impossible to move without credentials from county and city police department.

One unidentified man was killed by a state trooper at Miami when caught prowling about a building. A drunk was taken into custody by another militia man in Miami when caught near the First National bank.

Miami now is able to cope with the situation, city officials have advised. Relief trains bearing food and water were turned back at Miami and re-directed to Hollywood where the situation is said to be acute.

In Hollywood school buildings and churches have been blown over, hotels have been transformed into the emergency hospital and search in the debris for further victims began with the town's surviving man-power all at work.

Thirty bodies have been recovered there. The death list is expected to amount to at least 100. At Hallandale near Hollywood, Mrs. H. J. Kimball and her two week's old baby were drowned in an attempt to reach town from a house boat on the water front.

Every member of the family was killed. They were found all huddled up in one room where they evidently had fled to escape from the driving gale which had uprooted the house a few moments before.

Outside of the tropical radio stations at Hialeah one family of eight lay in the Palmetto thickets, huddled
