Soviet Legation Denies Report About Rebellion

Rica, Jan. 30.—(INS)—The Soviet legation here today officially denied reports that several regiments of troops, supporters of the exiled Leon Trotsky, had rebelled in Moscow and bombarded the Kremlin, famous government fortress.

The reports concerning the revolt and bombing were prevalent in Warsaw, Berlin and London. They were unconfirmed and stated that four regiments had revolted in Moscow and that the bombardment of the Kremlin by artillery was still in progress.

OLD TARKINGTON HOME IS UNIQUE

Spectators From Miles Around Visit Homestead Of Novelist's Father

Centerville, Ind., Jan. 30.—(UP)—Spectators from miles around come to visit the homestead of the Rev. Joseph Tarkington, grandfather of Booth Tarkington, the Hoosier novelist. One of the most interesting features of the two-story, brick residence is an old circular stairway, one of the few of its design in existence, and considered a work of architectural skill. In this house, Rev. Tarkington wrote a large part of the dairy which in later years was to provide material for his literary grandson. The novelist's understanding of human nature is reflected quaintly in his grandfather's record of homely, daily events.

John Stevenson Tarkington, father of Booth Tarkington, was born June 1832, while Rev. Tarkington was pastor of the Centerville M. E. church. He speaks in the diary of his success that year, nothing that he received $144. In 1841 he was on the circuit and got John Robbins to help him.

The dairy told that Robbins was easily depressed. He had a large cornfield in the Whitewater river bottom. The river overflowed when the corn was three feet high. Robbins told his wife he was ruined. The thought of losing his corn made him so sick he went to bed and didn't get up until next day.

The Rev. Tarkington went next day and pulled him out of bed, explaining to him that when the water receded the ground would be richer than ever before and he would have a better corn crop. After harvest Robbins agreed that the crop was better than ever before.

By 1839, Rev. Tarkington was making $400 yearly and was paying $75 house rent, when he became pastor of the Pearl Street M. E. church at Richmond, Indiana.

A story was told about a Quaker couple who liked Rev. Tarkington so well that they decided to attend the church and hear him preach. They made up their minds they would have to hear singing and would endure it. "Children, as we journey along, let us sing," the hymn began. The Friends didn't object to that verse, but when the preacher read the second stanza, "Let those refuse to sing, who never knew our Lord," the Friends became offended because they thought their refusal to sing had proved they never knew their Lord. However, after much apology and explanation, Rev. Tarkington regained their good will.

One other entry in the diary said: "Religious exercises were vigorous. I have seen women shouting, bending backward with their hair streaming down until it touched the floor. Some did not sway much but they would have a bad case of jerks. When one of these spells came on no two men could hold the victim still. The only thing to do was to get out of the way so she couldn't hurt herself. "One day I asked one of the lady members why they did this. She said that when she felt like shouting praise to God and did not do it, she would have the jerks. If she shouted her praises, she said the jerks could be eliminated."
