Hoosier With Same Name As Sen. Watson Has Hard Time Getting His Mail

Rushville, Ind., Mar. 24 — (U.P.) — James E. Watson, stopped in Rushville recently but few people recognized him. Watson, however, did not happen to be Senator Watson, but James E. Watson, of Lowell, Mass., who recently moved to Indianapolis, and who has been having a hard time getting his mail. All mail goes to the senator.

Watson is a representative of the J. C. Meyer Thread company.

Trips to the general delivery window in Indianapolis failed to yield any mail and the clerks were exceptionally nice.

After Watson failed to get any mail he became suspicious and took the matter up with postal officials only to find that the senator had been receiving all of his mail.

In an effort to untangle the affair Watson is having all his mail sent to him under the name of "John Henry" as his name is James Edmund Watson. The senator's name is James Eli Watson.
