of $2,500,000 daily through crude credit extension, according to Klein.

"Since we have conceded to the ladies the undisputed control of our shopping, theirs, I fear, must also be at least a part of the responsibility of often times setting in motion a practice of inefficient credit management which may lead to disaster," Klein said.

Klein discussed the large losses attributable to frequently changing styles but disclaimed any intention to argue that style shifts should be abolished.

"It would be much simpler to command Niagara to flow backwards and about as effective," he remarked.

BREMEN HELD UP BY BAD WEATHER; REPAIRS FINISHED

Saturday, after the Sinclair trial was over, I called a meeting of the directors of the company and took them to the vault and showed them the bonds.

"The board voted to turn over the bonds to the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Co., and I believe they are now deposited in a Chicago bank."

Stewart said interest coupons had been clipped up to December 15, 1923. This interest collected amounted to about $38,000.

"I gave Barnett bonds to make up the $38,000, and they were turned over to the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing company," Stewart added.

Stewart maintained that he never had actually held the bonds in his possession. He described his position as that of "a mere conduit" between Osler and the trustees of the Standard Oil of Indiana.

"That's all I know about the matter," he said.

DANGER OF FLOOD MENACING SOUTH

month was between seven and eight inches, the heaviest in 16 years.

Railroad traffic in Georgia, Alabama and Florida was assuming normal proportions today after a 24-hour period of complete cessation on some important lines. South Georgia railroads were washed out at various points.

Today dawned clear over most of the south, and fair weather was the general prospect. River rises, however, was considered likely as smaller streams emptied their surpluses into already swollen rivers.

BANK HEAD SAYS WALB APPROVED OF HIS ACTIONS

that we would get caught."

At the close of the reading of the Weaver statement, Special Judge Walter Lindley, of Danville, Illinois, who is presiding over the trial, admitted the confession into the records of the case.

Weaver's statement related that Hocker McKee, of Lagrange county, had signed a note in a legitimate deal at the bank, but later had died and since the estate would not pay the notes, Weaver kept signing McKee's signature to renewals so that the bank examiners would not discover the note was past due.

Bank Examiner Testifies

Bank Examiner Utt was called as the fourth witness today. He said he found parts of the ledger sheets of the Walb Construction company in the Lagrange bank and the remainder in Weaver's home. He said the bank had only $750,000 in Federal reserve bank certificates while it advertised a capital stock of $100,000 and a surplus of $25,000. Utt testified that the Walb Construction company now owed the bank about $60,000 and that Walb personally owed $11,900.

Homer Elliott, chief of the defense counsel, planned to cross examine Utt when the trial was resumed this afternoon.

Miss Kessler testified that she gave Weaver $2,000 in 1923 to invest for her. This money, according to Utt, was given the Lagrange Hardware company and later to the Walb Construction company while Weaver's forged notes replaced it.

Miss Miller, of Decatur, testified only to the effect that the memorandum of the Lagrange bank daily bank balance was placed each morning on Walb's desk. Walb formerly was vice-president of the defunct bank.

Floyd Bennett Reported To Be Little Improved

Quebec, Que., April 24.—(U.P.)—Floyd Bennett, American aviator, ill with double pneumonia, was reported at the Jeffrey Hale hospital early today to have "rested fairly well" last night.

"We think he is a little better this morning," it was stated.

Bennett is suffering with pneumonia in both lungs. Pleurisy has developed. While doctors regard his condition as serious, and he is attended by staff physicians and a New York specialist, they are hopeful of his youth and strong physique will win the battle.

Mrs. Bennett is with her husband. Yesterday Fraulein Junkers, promoter of the Bremen relief service, called on Mrs. Bennett and her husband.
