HOW UNITED PRESS HANDLES THE NEWS

VII.
It is a truism that what is new to the citizens of one nation may not be so regarded by the citizens of another nation.
That quite obvious fact makes extremely difficult the work of the United Press cable news staff members, for they must decide quickly concerning many items daily whether those items will be relished by the newspapers it serves abroad.

The United Press is serving directly 183 newspapers in the United States and some 600 indirectly.
It has 200 staff correspondents abroad and close to 2,000 correspondents who contribute news only occasionally. Dispatches go to newspapers for translation in the following languages: English, French, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, Dutch, Swedish, Danish, Norwegian, Czech Magyar, German, Chinese, Japanese, Hebrew, Polish and Tagalog.

World-wide news coverage means many arrangements. There must be a correspondent appointed in almost every section of the globe so that the United Press may be protected in case an event of national or international importance occurs.
For instance, when Lindbergh flew over Central America correspondents had been arranged for in every point of call and men who previously never had cabled more than 15 or 20 words in one dispatch suddenly were cabl-ing as many as 500 words in a single story.
