COURT HOUSE

Wife Seeks Divorce

A suit for divorce was filed in the Adams circuit court today by Esther E. Roop against Harry A. Roop. The plaintiff also asks that her maiden name of Esther E. Beery be restored. The couple were married December 26, 1925 and separated April 27, 1928. The plaintiff states that they were married in Newport, Ky., without the consent of her parents and that she was less than 16 years old at that time and was a pupil in Decatur high school. She also states that she and her husband agreed to keep their marriage secret until she was graduated from high school but that her husband objected to her meeting with her class and school associates in school functions and tormented her until she was forced to quit school and go to Toledo to live with him. She says she was forced to work to support herself and that her husband was cruel to her, often beating and striking her and upon one occasion practically tore her clothes off her body. The plaintiff also filed an application for suit money. Attorney C. L. Walters is counsel for the plaintiff.

"CLARENCE" HAS CLEVER STORY

Wheeler family.

Those marvelous young people, Cora and Bobby at once claim Clarence as a friend. Cora makes him her only friend and Bobby "who has more troubles in his private life than people have any conception of," confides in him freely. Clarence goes to live with the Wheeler family on their estate near Englewood, New Jersey and here he acts as a private secretary to his employer. In odd moments, he tunes the piano, plays the saxophone, types (off stage) and performs miscellaneous duties for members of the household. After three weeks, complications arise between Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler and the other members of the family but the final curtain finds them all, living peacefully ever after, through the influence of the ex-soldier, Clarence.

Booth Tarkington has given us a typical American comedy in "Clarence." The naive charm of the Indiana author in creating unusual incidents and leading these to a happy conclusion are especially in evidence in this comedy. The characters are all real Americans and the play will afford a very enjoyable evening to all who attend.

Smith.

"The plot was hatched in New York. I was hired to do the killing by a Los Angeles man."

"The motive for the killing was to dispose of Taylor before he released secrets of the movie colony to the press."

"Taylor planned to give a statement to the newspapers that would have ruined the character of at least one movie star and involved several others."

"Behind the whole plot was the dope traffic."
