No Changes

Why is it men resent changes in the arrangement of furniture in a room? Perhaps if the economical side were pointed out to them in regard to the wear on rugs and furniture they would comprehend more quickly than the fact that a change seems good to the housewife who is home so much.

here promised, will be in proportion to the welcoming reception. Some of them saw the hilarious gathering in St. Paul which Smith himself said was the largest political meeting he ever had addressed. "Wait until you get to Milwaukee," they said significantly.

Many persons here told members of the Smith entourage when it arrived that Milwaukee wants its beer. So Smith will receive a cordial hearing in this brewing center for his first formal and detailed discussion of his modification program since he accepted the nomination.

Smith comes here on an important mission, and to this he will turn his attention during a series of conferences with state political leaders to-day—winning of the large vote that has endorsed the policies of the La-follettes, father and son, for many years.

Smith's program already outlined in his western speeches, is similar in many respects to that of the La-follettes. It embodies water-power, farm relief, inland waterway development.

Shortly after he entered this state, the New York governor carried his waterpower stand a step further in a newspaper conference. A step which brings him nearer to the stand of Senator George Norris of Nebraska.

"I believe," the Democratic candidate said, "that the government ought to keep the control of the plant and operate it where it is feasible to do it and deliver the energy to the company under a contract that gives the government something to say about the rates."

The welcome here was not the only auspicious feature of the Democratic candidate's stay. He was given a suite, with rooms 1929, 1930, 1931, and 1932, which Democratic national committeeman John M. Callahan explained, he had selected as those were the first four years Smith would occupy the White House.

Bee Masters Not in Accord Over "Ringing"

The old bee masters differed greatly on the efficacy of the picturesque custom of "ringing" bees, according to a writer in the Detroit News. Edmond Southern's "Treatise Concerning the Right Use and Ordering of Bees," printed in 1594, says: "When the swarms is up it is no good to ring them, as some doe, nay it is a common thing where there is no experience to keep a stirre and lay on either with a Bason, Kettle or Frying pan taking (as the common proverb is) great pains and have little thanks: for by such means they make the bees angry and go further to settle than otherwise they would."

Samuel Puchas, a rector in Essex at the time, wrote: "There is this benefit of ringing, that if you have neighbors near you that keep bees you may give notice thereby to prevent wrangling if some of theirs should rise at the same time. But if they will not be stayed, but hastening on still, go beyond your bounds, the ancient law of Christendome permiteth you to pursue them withersoever, but our common law is more univell, for if your bees be out of your ground your property is lost, if you be not more courteous."

Little Change Noted in Making of Bricks

Making brick was preancient history when Egypt was young. Plutarch tells the history of the phrase, "he's a brick," by relating the anecdote of a Spartan king who argued against building a wall around the capital city by pointing to his army and saying, "There is my wall, and every man a brick."

Basically, the manufacture of brick has not changed since those early days, if we except the vitrification. The process has simply been refined and modernized.

Herodotus writes of an inscription on a brick tomb built 16 centuries B. C. which reads:

"Disparage me not by comparing me with pyramids built of stone. I am as much superior to them as Ammon is to common deities. I am constructed of brick made from mud which adhered to the end of poles and was drawn up from the bottom of the lake."

Outdid Louis Philippe

Concerning the unhappy King Louis Philippe of France, Mr. Ralph Nevill in "Echoes Old and New," tells a good tale.

Revisiting Twickenham, where his old home was, he was accosted by a man who, pulling off his hat, respectfully hoped that his royal highness was well.

"What's your name?" inquired the ex-king. He was told.

"I do not recollect it," said the royal exile. "What were you when I lived here?"

"Please, your royal highness," replied the man, "I kept the Crown—an inn close to the entrance of Orleans house."

"Did you?" said Louis Philippe, smiling grimly. "Well, my good fellow, you did what I was unable to do."

Surprise!

A well-known magician, who wore a goatee and mustache, happened one day to see a man who was his perfect double. The magician expected to use the double in a substitution trick.

"When I jump into the trunk," he said, "you jump out of your chair in the audience and come up on the stage, and the people will think it's me."

That evening the magician jumped into the trunk and closed the lid, and at the same instant the double arose in his seat and yelled, "Here I am!" but the trick "fopped" miserably. The new hired man had shaved off his whiskers.

Optimists and Pessimists

Optimists and pessimists have each their uses. We know how often the minor difficulties of life may be defeated by mere cheerfulness. But when the difficulty is big, a bigger effort is needed; you have to get down to causes and effects, and recognize what is wrong before starting to cure it. Nothing is more foolish than to shirk swallowing an unpleasant medicine, because two or three trifling and superficial symptoms seem for a moment to belie your disease.

Fortunes to Writers

Thomas Hardy's fortune of over $450,000 does not seem so large after all, if we remember that George Eliot made $200,000 from "Adam Bede" alone, and that more than one best seller within recent years has eclipsed that figure.

Present-day novelists, however, usually have cinema payments to add to their book royalties, and their cinema totals sometimes exceed those from the sale of their books.—Passing Show, London.

Ari of Misquotation

At a banquet at the Biltmore recently a prominent Broadwayite made a talk, part of it including a sentence by an immortal poet. After the speech the guest next to him whispered: "You had that line of Keats's a bit twisted." "I did it that way purposely—I didn't want them to think I had only read it the day before."—New York Evening Journal.

In the case of Eldora Douglas vs. Jay B. Stoutenberry et al, the commissioner was ordered to sell the real estate at public sale.

Set For Trial

The claims of Edward and William Zeser and Tresa Mary Schafer against the Peter Zeser estate have been set for trial on October 6.

Motions Filed

In the cases of Daisy Lloyd and Clifton R. Oberholzer against Walter Miller, the defendant filed motions to make the complaint more specific.

Suit Filed

The Indiana Electric company has filed a suit on a note against Glenn Venis. Attorney Ed A. Bosse is counsel for the plaintiff.

Demurrer Filed

In the case of John A. Maxwell et al vs. Robert Seidel et al, the motion of the defendant to make the complaint more specific was overruled. The defendant then filed a demurrer to the complaint.

Judgment Awarded

In the case of F. S. Royster Guano Co., vs. Edward J. Fricke, the court found for the plaintiff and awarded judgment in the sum of $126.90 and costs.

Divorce Granted

In the case of Earl D. Hough vs. Minnie B. Hough, the court awarded a divorce to the plaintiff. The custody of the three minor children was awarded to the defendant, and the plaintiff was ordered to pay $32 every four weeks for the support of the children.

To Sell Personal Property

In the estate of Mary A. Miller, the administrator was authorized to sell certain personal property at public sale.

Rotary Troop Elects Officers

Boy Scouts of Rotary troop No. 1 elected officers Friday evening. Scoutmaster Clarence Beavers acted as chairman of the meeting. James Burk was elected senior patrol leader, and Harold Melchi was named his assistant. Paul Hancher was elected Scribe. The patrol leaders elected were Roland Reppert, with Fred Musser as his assistant; Richard Schug, with Bruce Wallace as his assistant. Members of the patrols are: Reppert's patrol—Paul Hancher, Louis Bucher and Jesse Sutton; Schug's patrol—James Moses, Harry Jones and Cecil Schaffer.

The troop decided to Ex Wednesday evening at 7:15 o'clock as the regular meeting time. A large number of Scouts turned out and enjoyed the meeting. Scoutmaster Beavers showed the Scouts what their various duties would be during the year. All boys wishing to enter the troop are asked to see Scoutmaster Beavers.
