They questioned Frank P. Mandy, who shared a studio with Hitchcock, but Mandy said he never had seen Miss Knaak.

At times she seemed almost happy as she lay, swathed in bandages, on her bed. She told Alvin at one time that as soon as she was out of the hospital, "I'll tell you all about it."

TO BUILD LARGER, FASTER AIRSHIPS

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Nov. 2.—(U.P.)—Plans for building two vast dirigibles for trans-Atlantic service, larger, faster and stronger than the Graf Zeppelin, were announced today by Dr. Hugo Eckener.

Dr. Eckener discussed the lessons learned from the trip of the Graf Zeppelin to the United States and return, which was completed here early yesterday.

New Hangars Needed

Eckener said two immense hangars would be required for the new Leviathans of the air. One hangar would be in Berlin, he said, and the site of the other has not been decided. However, he believed the Rhine valley was the most favorable spot for a central trans-Atlantic airport and suggested Baden as a good location.

Eckener repeated that the return flight of the Graf Zeppelin, during which she was beaten down almost to the water by a gale off Newfoundland and at times was close to disaster, had demonstrated that the Graf Zeppelin was inadequate for ocean service.

The framework and motors of the Graf Zeppelin must be strengthened, Eckener said. For trans-Atlantic service to be maintained on a regular schedule, airships must have more power.

Eckener announced that the Graf Zeppelin may be used as a training school for dirigible flying and conducting meteorological research to aid trans-Atlantic service.

Hence he plans to resume long distance flights in the Graf Zeppelin soon, including another flight across the Atlantic, but he thought it improbable that he would fly to the United States again before next year.

It was learned that Dr. Eckener would fly the Graf Zeppelin to Berlin on Monday and pay a personal visit to President Paul von Hindenburg. The Zeppelin will be moored in the suburb of Staaken and placed on exhibition.

Rev. Miller Preaches Series Of Sermons At Baptist Church Here

A series of Sunday evening sermons is being preached by the Rev. O. E. Miller, at the Baptist church, from the general subject, "The Ten Commandments in Modern Life." Rev. Miller is attempting to answer such questions as "Are they out of date?" and "Has Decatur discarded them?" Last Sunday evening, the first commandment was used to an appreciative audience. Next Sunday evening, the second commandment will be used. "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven images nor bow down to them." Is the cross an image to worship? Is the radio taking the place of worship? These and other questions will be discussed under this fundamental law. The other commandments will be used one each Sunday evening.

Miss Helen Shroll, student at Indianapolis Teacher's College, will arrive home this evening, for an over the week-end visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Shroll.
