Rumors Concern Smart Sleeveless Sport Dresses

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(U.P.)—In a surprisingly short time spring will have come to the shop window. Exotic palm backgrounds and skies no bluer than the costumes exploited, will arrest the hurried Christmas shopper on her rounds. One begins to hear cottons spoken of in terms of respect and regarded with admiration.

There are stimulating rumors concerning smart sleeveless sports dresses for sun drenched southern mornings, dresses reflecting the modern spirit of decoration in some cases and harkening back to the 1880's in others. Identification of cotton with sport is on the style program. Among the desired materials are piques, as well as sheer muslins and lawns. It is not difficult to visualize organdie interpreting the evening mode or to think of sports and day clothes generally in terms of cool linen even ratine. A distinctive feature of some of the newer patterns is that they are taken from those having scored in wool. Remembering the success of tweed patterned crepes, one feels more confidence in cottons printed after the wool manner.

The recurrence of the short jacket theme is compatible with the growing interest in cottons. One begins to flirt again with the idea of a linen suit, its figured top jacket opening over organdie. "Tablecloth linen" is the new note. Introducing unaccustomed fabrics adds a flip to the style situation, while the continued opportunity to play with color and to assemble costume units makes for added zest in getting about the business of meeting spring half way.

Mrs. Graham first mentioned a number of rivers found in the foreign countries, and the songs which had tended to make them famous, before mentioning the notable rivers of our own United States. Several sub-topics on the subject were read which proved very interesting. The Ohio River was the outstanding river in the United States studied and the paper on this subject was read by Mrs. H. F. Callow, in which she described the body of water and explained its resources. This topic was followed by Mrs. Fred Fruchte reporting on the sources of Commerce from the Ohio River. In keeping with this part of the program Mrs. Leo Saylor sang a number of songs, "Where the Shannon River Flows", "On the Banks of

ART DEPARTMENT STUDIES INDIANA ARTISTS

"Indiana Artists" was the subject of a very interesting study given before the members of the Art Department of the Womens Club, Monday evening, at the regular meeting of the club which was held at the home of Mrs. R. D. Myers on Winchester street. Mrs. Nellie Haney read the paper on "Early Indiana Artists" which furnished a foundation and introduction to the subject, after which the study was taken from the book "Art and Artists of Indiana", the first chapter of which was read by Mrs. Frech Hower. This chapter introduced the art of Indiana which started with the founding of the village, New Harmony, along the southern coast of Indiana. Mrs. R. D. Myers then read the second and third chapter of the book study, which took up the artists who lived in the settlement, New Harmony, and pointed out how all art and artists of Indiana, first established residence in that village before spreading out over the country. New Harmony furnished a home for art and all other culture of this state. After the lesson study, a business session of the club was held after which delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.
