Precedent Set In Case Against Liquor 'Snooper'

Evansville, Ind., Jan. 16—(UP)—Thomas Leach won only a $1 verdict in his slander suit against his neighbor, Mrs. Eliza Barnickie, but it was believed that the superior court jury which heard the case set a precedent that will serve to prevent "snooping" by liquor foes.

During the trial it developed that a raid was made on Leach's home in which no liquor was found, occurred after Mrs. Barnickie reported to the Vanderburgh county Womens Christian Temperance Union that she suspected him of violating the dry law. The head of the Union was accused by the defendants attorneys of causing the raid.

In behalf of Leach, a street car conductor, it was shown that "a little satchel" which he carried from home each morning, and which figured in testimony, contained his lunch.

Lights in the basement of the Leach home were also sighted as "suspicious".

His counsel remarked: "If every mans home that had a light burning in the basement was raided, every home in Evansville would be visited by the authorities."
