FRENCH MARRIAGE AGENCIES HAVE A BOOMING BUSINESS; FEES MODERATE

(By N. Reynolds Packard)

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Paris, June 1.—(U.P.)—Matrimonial agencies in France are making fortunes these days attempting to procure nuptial felicity at moderate fees for great numbers of French spinsters. According to an estimate just published there are 2,000,000 or so more women than men of marriageable age in this country.

The number of marriage bureaus in France has increased five times since before the war while advertisements regarding farm implements, pigs, cattle and horses in the country newspapers and magazines are being crowded out with appeals for mates. In the larger cities, including Paris, periodicals devoted entirely to the finding of matrimonial partners are enjoying tremendous sales.

The magazines in Paris are as a rule of gaudy appearance. The cover generally portrays a smiling bride in gorgeous costume, holding a huge bouquet of flowers, or a happy mother playing with her children while a handsome and tender husband looks close at hand. The advertisements are a strange mixture of sentimentality and finance, in which the girl describes her ideal and adds that she has a house, a farm, or several thousand francs for a dowry. Two such magazines in Paris are entitled "Hypon" and "Mariage."

The matrimonial agencies are now being managed with great skill and subtlety. Some of them give dances and parties to which men are invited, not knowing that they are to be appraised as prospective husbands. If marriage as prospective husbands. If res, the agency receives a commission based on the financial value of each match. If a girl does not secure a husband she is obliged to pay only a small fee for the experiment.
