PLAN ROAD TO HONOR LINCOLN

Memorial Highway From Hodgenville, Ky., To Springfield, Ill., Proposed

Vincennes, Ind., July 13.—(U.P.)—Steps preliminary to forming a southern Indiana organization to co-operate in a proposal to build a highway from Hodgenville, Ky., to Springfield, Ill., as a memorial to Abraham Lincoln, were taken at a meeting here today.

This committee includes Albert Wedekind, Dale, state highway commissioner; John Chappel, Petersburg, and Dr. J. N. McCoy, Vincennes, president of the Hoosier State Automobile Association.

Illinois already has an organization, and it is proposed to form one in Kentucky. Fifteen members of the Lincoln Memorial Boulevard association, the Illinois organization, attended the meeting here, which was presided over by Curtis Shake, Vincennes. Mayor Claude E. Gregg, assured the visitors that Indiana will assist in the project.

U. S. IS GOAL OF FRENCHMEN AND POLISH AIRMEN

making a second attempt to cross the Atlantic, was not equipped with radio.

The French air ministry advised extreme caution in accepting the position of either Costes or the Polish fliers. In view of the extreme height at which the sighted plane was traveling they were unwilling to confirm a report that the Question Mark was sighted over Santander, Spain, arguing that it might have been the Polish plane.

But there was no doubt about the Question Mark being seen over the Bay of Biscay, 30 miles off the French coast. The red plane was easily seen.

The Marshal Pilsudski, with an advantage in speed and fuel capacity, got off to a smooth start. The big grayish-white plane rolled down the runway gracefully, took off perfectly and in a few moments was out of sight. The Question Mark required a little longer to take off but once in the air its motors hummed perfectly.

According to the French meteorological bureau the planes would have favorable winds to accompany them across the Atlantic. Excellent weather prevailed over the whole ocean.

The start of the plane was sudden and quite unexpected. Only a few newspapermen and photographers were on hand. Bellonte's English wife was at the field to bid her husband goodbye.

What preparations Costes and his partner had made were for the ostensible purpose, in view of the French ban on trans-Atlantic flights, of flying to Tokyo. A few moments before the take-off, however, when Costes was asked if he really was going to Tokyo, he said:

"No, New York."

Costes left a letter for the air ministry reading:

"We are leaving for a prohibited destination. We place the responsibility on no one."

Idzikowski, in an exclusive interview with the United Press just before his take-off, said he was absolutely confident of reaching New York.

The Polish flier said he would be satisfied as long as he landed somewhere in the United States, although New York City was his chief objective. He said:

"We really have no definite destination. We only wish to blaze the trail to somewhere in the United States. We have every confidence that our single motor plane will get us across the Atlantic."

Idzikowski declared that his failure on the previous attempt to cross the Atlantic did not intimidate him.

"Our motto on this trip is 'sink or swim,'" Idzikowski added. "Anything to get across."

The two planes were prepared and fueled side by side. The Marshal Pilsudski was the first to be ready and was standing outside his hangar, ready for the dash, as the Question Mark was being put in condition for the flight by two score of workers. The provisions loaded on the Question Mark consisted of several bottles of water, packages of biscuits, dried meat, dried preserves and a quantity of pemmican.

They also carried medical supplies, including grease with which to smear their faces against the cutting winds.

Before the Polish fliers started, the United Press reporter was the last to shake their hands, wishing them luck. As the plane started Kubala shouted:

"This ground is historic as it was here that Lindbergh landed. We hope to make other land historic in the United States."

Idzikowski said he hoped they would be able to make their trip to New York or some other point in the United States in 45 hours.

The Question Mark planned to fly to Cape Ortegal, Spain, and thence to Halifax and New York via the Azores on his trans-Atlantic flight, it was learned today.

The information had the support of a dispatch from the fishing boat Muetta which said the boat sighted an airplane resembling Costes' about 30 miles northwest of Cape Ferret, France.

The location given by the Muetta is on an almost straight line between Paris and Santander, Spain, whence Costes presumably would follow the coast to Cape Ortegal, reversing the route followed by the eastbound trans-Atlantic planes Yellow Bird and Pathfinder in recent weeks.

Chicago Tribune Plane Still Ice-Bound In North

Chicago, July 13.—(U.P.)—The "Tin" Bowler, the Chicago Tribune's trans-oceanic amphibian, ice-bound at Port Burwell, Ungava, Labrador, will not be able to resume its flight to Berlin until at least Sunday, radio advisers from its crew to the Tribune said today.

Pilots Bob Gast and Parker Cramer are busy repairing damage a huge cake of ice, swept ashore, did to the ship's side, the message said.

Eskimos piling rocks in the cabin relieved the tension on the fall and a rising tide were all that saved the plane from destruction, Robert Wood, third member of the party, reported.

Indianapolis Radio Stations Seek More Power

Indianapolis, July 11.—(U.P.)—Plans for petitioning the federal radio commission for big power boosts have been announced by both Indianapolis stations, WFBM and WKBF.

The WFBM petition is ready for filing Monday according to President Norman A. Perry of the Indianapolis Power and Light company, which owns and operates the station. If granted the station will be changed from the present 1,000 watts to 50,000 watts and full-time operation on 1,160 kilocycles.

WKBF's plans for increased power include moving the station to a place on state road 34, between Indianapolis and Crawfordsville, and maintenance of a studio in Crawfordsville as well as here it was announced by Noble B. Watson, owner of the station.

FLIERS FINALLY END LONG FLIGHT

37th refueling at 1,500 feet was the gathering of refuse in the tail group of the plane.

"Examination showed that paper and other refuse tossed out of the plane gathered in the tail group," McManus said, "and as this condition grew the Angelino became wobbly and hard to control."

Airport figures show that the Angelino traveled 85 miles per hour and would have circled the globe. Airmen place importance in this fact because for the first time in history, a plane has been sustained in flight long enough to have gone around the earth.

Much interest was attached to the physical examinations the men were forced to take.

It was announced at the hospital in Culver City that Reinhardt's pulse registered 120 when he entered the institution and 30 minutes later it had dropped to 96. Mendell's pulse beat 109 when he first was examined and a half hour later registered 92.

Reinhardt's blood pressure ranged from 160 to 140, and Mendell's from 136 to 120. The eye reflection and respiration of both pilots was somewhat above normal.

Reinhardt, due to the fact that he handled most of the refueling for the Angelino and was forced to inhale gasoline fumes and subject himself to additional nerve strain, felt the effects of the long flight more than Mendell.

Both fliers were deaf when they landed and it was several hours before their hearing reached a degree approaching normal.
