SELECTING JURY FOR SNOOK TRIAL

Seven Jurors Tentatively Selected At Opening Of Court Today

Court Room, Columbus, O., July 25.—(U.P.)—The problem of jury selection continued today in the trial of Dr. James H. Snook, 48, former Ohio State university professor and Olympic games revolver champion, for the murder of Theora Hix, 24-year-old medical student.

Four women and three men were in the jury box when the session opened and the first two talesmen examined failed to qualify. One of these was Mrs. Clara Rhodes, the first woman called who has failed of acceptance. She was excused when she expressed views against capital punishment.

Snook seemed more interested in what went on today. He talked animatedly with his attorneys during the first half hour and had paper in front of him on which he made occasional notations.

Melvin T. Hix and wife, parents of the dead girl, watched the proceedings eagerly. He never missed an opportunity to stare at Snook, but the alleged murderer avoided the gaze of his inamorata's father.

Questions to prospective jurors touched their attitude on sex relations and usually revealed a liberal view. The questions embraced the willingness of talesmen to discuss delicate matters of human relations in mixed company. None would admit they would suffer hampering embarrassment.

Jury Trying R. J. Reynolds Is Discharged By Judge

London, July 25.—(U.P.)—The jury which was trying Young R. J. Reynolds, son of the late American tobacco magnate was discharged today by the presiding judge, Justice Humphreys, because of certain irregularities. No verdict had been reached on the manslaughter charge.

Shortly after the case was called this morning the justice said it was reported to him that the foreman of the jury had conversed with several witnesses involved in the case, one of whom was the foreman's friend. Therefore, Justice Humphreys concluded, it was impossible to proceed with the case and a rehearing was adjourned for a date to be fixed later.

Reynolds, whose automobile ran over and fatally injured a bicyclist, was granted bail.

Bomb Causes Scare In Chicago Loop District

Chicago, July 25.—(U.P.)—Loop theatre crowds stampeded for shelter when a black powder bomb exploded in the rear of the Davis company's department store last night.

The blast racked the entire south end of the downtown business district. The detonation was heard a mile or more away. Thousands followed police and fire apparatus to the scene. Smoke and powder fumes rolled from the alley. Glass fell from shattered windows as high as the fourth and fifth floors of the Davis store and neighboring buildings.

Philip Iwanski, a chauffeur, gathering waste material from the alley, said he noticed a pasteboard box at a freight entrance to the department store.

"I picked it up," he told police. "It felt hot. I didn't know what it was. I laid it down again and walked on. I had gone but a few feet until there was a terrific flash and explosion."

HOLLYWOOD'S FILM SHOP

By Duane Hennessy
UP Staff Correspondent
Hollywood, July 25.—(U.P.)—Famous directors may be robbed of another privilege, that of having their sets colored to fit their moods, if natural color photography becomes universal in pictures through new scientific discoveries.

At present most directors have favorite color tones, which are followed in their settings, and which they prefer to photograph, in many cases because they can best judge photographic effects in them.

Clarence Brown, who produced "Flesh and the Devil" and "The Trail of '98" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, prefers all his sets in a uniform shade of gray, when possible. By the same token the setting appears to his eye as it will look on the screen. He started the plan some years ago when he directed "Butterfly."

Tod Browning, famous director of Lon Chaney pictures, likes vivid reds and blues, which make contrasting effects. Most of his weird settings in such plays as "London After Midnight" and "Where East is East" appeared distinctly red to the eye.

"Fred Niblo, who just completed directing John Gilbert in "Redemption," likes authentic coloring—or the coloring one sees in real life, and leaves it to the cameraman to adapt these to the exigencies of photography.

George Hill, director of "The Flying Fleet," goes in for blacks and whites with as little conflicting color as possible, for he was a cameraman before he became a director.

Lionel Barrymore, the actor, who is directing nowadays, prefers shades of brown that "match up" with the new panchromatic makeup of the players, as he says it gives a better perspective of the whole pictorial scheme at a glance, without resorting to the blue glass, or ray filter. Barrymore directed "Madame X" and "The Green Ghost."

A lot of strange things are seen and heard in Hollywood. And now we have a fat woman who frankly admits she is sorry for the thin members of her sex. She is Cupid Alasworth, 250-pound vaudeville maker her screen debut as the wise-cracking "advice to the lovelorn" editor in Pathe's "Big News," which features Robert Armstrong and Carol Lombard.

"Thin women are always worried," Cupid said. "That keeps them skinnier than all the diets in the world."

players feel that equity has attempted to take advantage of the talkies situation and drive into a place where it is not needed.

Through the same line of reasoning the idea is extended to include the belief that New York is attempting to monopolize film jobs through equity.

The action of Frank Gillmore, executive of equity, in dissolving the local committee of equity was fuel to this underground fire.

So far equity's drastic ruling prohibiting any member to set foot on any set or location has not hurt the studios.

When an equity member has been called for a role and has turned it down because of equity's demand, the producer merely has found someone else to take the part.

The equity players who have turned down non-equity contracts have been the only ones hurt so far.

Incidentally the foothold stage players had gained in Hollywood through the talkies seem rather slippery with the equity warfare.

Motion picture names always have been the greatest drawing cards of the stage names, added because of their speaking ability, may fall by the wayside unless the present situation clears quickly.

All the stage stars belong to equity and they fear to disobey equity demands when they are not yet sure of what the screen promises.

A few more months of the present stand-off and all the legitimate actors will be back on the stage and the screen will be left to the former silent stars.
