

The Off-The-Forehead Hat Scores and Is Scored

New York, Nov. 22—(UP)—Considerable criticism is being voiced by the lords of creation anent the off-the-face hat. They are too revealing—not only leaving nothing to the imagination but presenting too bold a front to the world, say they. Perhaps they are right. It is not easy to wear the forehead revealing hat. Shadows help, but so do the voluminous fur collars in which the lower part of the face is hidden making the exposed eyes and brows the more telling.

Women themselves appear to have seized upon the new style hat with as much enthusiasm as they have on the new style frock. Its fun of course to be so entirely transformed as this season's mode permits, and there is something of the zest of dressing up that brings back childish memories of pinning up one's curls and strutting about in big sister's clothes.

Hats have such an amazing way of being sophisticated baby bonnets, not only in contour, but when they are shirred and made of ribbon, to say nothing of the new evening ones which are sometimes of lace. Long back brims balance shallow crowns and there is almost always a flattering long side line. Ears like knees are completely hidden.

The popularity of the new turbans is coming along as per schedule. There is a turban for every type this winter. Better still a turban for every sort of fur collar.

The Dramatic, Department of the Woman's Club will meet at the home of Miss Margaret Mylett, Monday evening at seven-thirty o'clock, for the regular study meeting. Mrs. James F. Arnold will be the leader.

INVESTIGATIONS WILL CONTINUE

Grand Jury Probably Will Not Complete Work Before Next Week

After a week of work, the Adams county grand jury apparently has not completed its job of probing various cases of alleged violation brought to its attention. Several Berne residents were called before the jury today and questioned, but indications as to what case was being investigated were released.

About 15 or 20 Decatur young men and women have been called before the grand jury Saturday and Monday and one Decatur man appeared before that body today. It is thought that the jury has directed its attention to alleged law violations in and near Decatur.

It was not said how long the jury will continue its session, but indications are that the work will not be completed before the middle of next week at the earliest. The jurors always make an inspection trip to the various county institutions before adjourning and this is usually made after criminal cases have been disposed of.
