Just a two-week stretch left in the primary and the candidates will be busy every minute.

A Georgia town is trying a new plan to control whoopee life, a curfew at eleven o'clock being the signal for every one to get under cover and stay there.

President Hoover in the Yale daily says this country needs leadership. And how? Looks as though he was in about the position to do some of it and that's just what the folks are waiting to see.

Lebanon tax payers are strenuously objecting to the building of a high school gymnasium which must convince a lot of folks of their backwardness in educational matters.

The old fashioned stage coach robbery, detailed in the wild west shows, is now being given in realistic style by modern bandits who are holding up busses using much the same method, a lot of fire arm noise and shouting at a lonely spot on the road.

The republican party is certainly one that can fit itself to any situation. After claiming to be the dry party for the past ten or twelve years, their candidates in a half dozen eastern states are running this year on wet or moist platforms while in as many western states they are still going it dry.

found guilty by a Columbia City jury of assisting in the hold-up of the Columbia City State bank just about a year ago at which time several people were shot. Seraceno was identified by several people as the man who handled the machine gun that day and if true he is getting off rather light with a sentence of ten to twenty-five years or even life.

The decision of Judge Sutton

We would think that Mr. Young, wish to retire for either justly or unjustly he has placed himself in ing the gruesome and undeniable facts is that to say the least someone was careless to the last degree.

Senator Joseph Robinson, only democrat among the American delegates to the naval conference gave an interesting account of the new treaty over the radio Sunday noon and explained what it was all about. Of course we all enjoyed it but when he got through we could not help but feel that Senator Joe, wise as he is, feels that the conference after all was somewhat of a failure, that a lot of time and effort has been consumed and a lot of paper used just to make it appear that the meeting had not been in vain. We hope it will tend to prevent war but we doubt it and it is questionable whether it will do any thing but make us destroy millions of dollars worth of ships and then rebuild the navy some way or other.

When A. P. Giannini, the big San Francisco banker, received $1,500, 000 as his share of bank profits for one year, he gave it all to the University of California, explaining that he "didn't want to die a millionaire." It is really no disgrace to die a millionaire. Indeed many Americans think it is quite the opposite. But there's no accounting for tastes, especially millionaires' tastes. Andrew Carnegie felt the same way about it, and if the truth were told, so do a surprising number of living nabobs.
It is probably a good thing, too.
It is better for children not to inherit vast wealth. It is better for society not to keep great wealth concentrated in families. It is better for a successful man, in his declining years, to be content with comfort and a reasonable amount of luxury, without being burdened with the responsibility and power of a vast fortune—Goshen News-Times.

Good roads and protective legislation were discussed in an atmosphere of good fellowship at a luncheon recently when the executive group of the Hoosier State Automobile Association had as their guests the members of the state highway commission, John L.
Brown, director, and Wm. L. Titus, engineer, according to announcement made at the close of the meeting. The splendid appreciation of the Indiana public for the excellent highways the state is now getting, along with the need for protecting these highways was discussed. "It is positively known," declared J. Cooper Props, president of the association, "that two truck loads coming to the state line from Cincinnati and in other cases, coming from Chicago to the state line, have had both loads transferred to one truck at the state line; in other words, the laws and enforcement of laws in our neighboring states protects their highways, but Indiana's laws are such that our highways are carrying two, and it is reported in some cases as much as three loads on one truck." It was the consensus of opinion that our Indian laws and their enforcement should insure reasonable protection to our highways.

APPOINTEE IS

The Red Jacket Coal company case, Parker's backers thought he also could dispel the far more alarming opposition from a political standpoint, which arose among Republican senators from border states who have been receiving protests from negro voters about speeches Parker made in a gubernatorial campaign in North Carolina before he was appointed judge.

It was these Republican senators who have been going to the White House during the past two weeks attempting to persuade the president to withdraw the nomination.
This Mr. Hoover steadfastly refused to do, taking the position it was a matter for the senate to fight out.

The leaders of the opposition to the nominee, Chairman Norris of the committee and Senator Borah, Repub., Idaho, opposed the calling of Parker. They said the case already had been heard fully and believed there was no reason other than one of political expediency for reopening it to hear the nominee.

The sizeable majority against the nominee in the committee virtually makes certain his ultimate rejection in the senate where the opposition controls more votes comparatively than it did in the committee.

GANG BULLETS
MURDER THREE

wagon drivers' union through the efforts of Walter Wakefield, part owner of the saloon and one of those killed, according to a witness the police found but kept under the veil of anonymity. This witness said the attempt failed and that an official was heard to say that Wakefield would "be found dead in an alley."

Besides Wakefield, Frank Delre, 33, the other owner of the saloon, and Joseph Special, a waiter, were the victims of the lone assassin's unerring aim with the traditional weapon of gangsters, a .45 caliber automatic pistol.

From the position of the bodies and other evidence, Capt. William Stamper pieced together the story of the massacre today and told it this way:

Wakefield was counting the night's receipts after the doors had been locked. Delre and Special were the only others in the saloon after the night's business.

Apparently the assassin tapped on the window, was recognized and permitted to enter. He ordered a steak of beer, tendering a dollar bill. Wakefield gave him three quarters in change.

Then the killer, apparently with out a word of warning, shot Wakefield in the back of the head.

Special, who had been in the backroom, was unarmed and trapped but opened his pocket knife, seized a plaster cast of a saint and started toward the killer. He was shot in the arm and fell.

Delre had fled toward the door and was shot in the head as he vaulted a cigar case.

The assassin turned again on Special and shot him three times as he lay wounded on the floor.
His murders done, the assassin fled in a black sedan.

Several squads of police arrived in time to see Special die but he could not talk and probably wouldn't have for gangsters die silently.

LINDBERGH'S

Just after 11 o'clock the drone of the approaching plane was heard and a beam of light from the beacon tower pierced the sky and caught the ship as it circled the field. The spotlight followed it as it circled twice at an altitude of about 3,000 feet, and then gracefully slid to earth.

The crowd surged toward the Lindberghs, breaking through lines of police battling hard to keep them back.

Lindbergh rose from his place in the front cockpit, and then Mrs.
Lindbergh arose as the crowd thundered a welcome and the flashlights of cameramen boomed. Motorcycle policemen cleared the way to the hangar.
