LILY MIKI

ABBY SALZMAN

New York, Jan. 29.—(UP)—Prodigies are getting so numerous and invade such diverse fields that they really have to be geniuses to attract attention in 1931.

When Master Joseph Sheehan, aged 12, made a solo flight at Roosevelt Field, Long Island, recently with the help of several cushions to enable him to reach the controls—he created a sensation in aviation circles. Joseph is the most spectacular air prodigy yet recorded.

The juvenile genius in the musical field has long been a familiar figure. Mozart began his career as composer at the age of four and gave his first public recital when he was five. In our own time we have the youthful virtuoso of the violin, Ricci and Menuhin.

Practically every art or science has its prodigies; there is in Paris a boy of 15, Julio Laparra, whose paintings are receiving respectful attention from some of Europe's foremost art connoisseurs. His work covers a wide range of subjects and for remarkable conception and technique is the envy of his older contemporaries.

In the theatrical world we have 8 1/2 years old Paul Benedict who is "wowing 'em" by the quality of his acting in "La Mome Detective," a play now running in Paris. His success is all the more remarkable since French audiences are among the most critical in the world. Chicago has its prodigy in the person of Abby Salzman, who at the age of 5 can read and speak Hebrew, German and English—with the added accomplishment of being a spelling genius, as is Ward Randall, aged 12 of Whitehall, Ill., who won the state championship free-for-all.

From out of the west like young Lochinvar, comes Lorraine Graham, nine years old. Lorraine is an equestrienne stuntist and can perform the most breathless feats of horsemanship. She appears as much at home on a bucking bronco as on the ground and claims that she can do anything on a horse that her elders can.

To return to music, we have in 11-year-old Teddy Beers, of Groton, Mass., a pocket edition of the renowned Sousa. Teddy claims to be the youngest band leader in the country. Lily Miki, aged six, a New York-born Japanese miss, promises to make history with a piano.

Hollywood, home of the movies, is a veritable vineyard of prodigies. With very little effort one can recall a score of baby stars, whose names have been emblazoned in fiery letters along Broadway. And the crop of aspirants for like honors has never been richer than at the present.

Optimistic parents of precocious offspring are drawn to Hollywood like steel filings to a magnet. Consequently, there is always on hand a large and versatile assortment of these embryonic stars.

Society at Miami Favors
Whites and Pastel Shades

Miami, Fla., Feb. 2.—(UP)—Hialeah Park race meet, one of the early indexes of what the smart set will choose for spring garb, presented this year whites and pastel shades as the predominating note. It was unseasonably chilly during the opening days, but occasionally loosened coats afforded alert society writers information.

Princess Alexandria Victoria, feted guest of Mrs. Fred A. Poor, appeared in an ensemble of black tweed, flecked with white. Mrs. Poor wore black in contrast to the whites and pastels of her guests.

The Whitehays were morning for the late Harry Payne Whitney, famous turfman, some of whose stud came through victorious under the silks of Mrs. John Hay Whitney, and of Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney.

Mrs. Barclay Warburton chose a red hat, setting off a modestly hued ensemble. Several red berets were seen, and red slippers contrasted with the white worn by others.

Mrs. Cliff Reeder, wife of Miami's mayor, chose a coat of congo pink with a raglan cut and belted. She was host to party including William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor.

Mrs. Frank J. Bruen, wife of the director-manager, wore an orchid corsage with her black suit and hat. Mrs. S. P. Robineau, wife of the Florida legislator, wore a sailor hat with a pink coat, belted. Mrs. Joseph Hergensheimer was tailored in blue tweeds, and Mrs. Dodge Sloane in pirate blue with brightly figured scarf.

Mrs. James Walker, wife of New York's mayor also accentuated her garb with red, a feather of color in her hat and a scarf bright play against a chevron.

Brighter colors were predicted the season advanced and Miami sun reassured itself.
