Success Is Theirs in Triple Role
Of Wives, Mothers and Stars

Leading Lights of Stage and Screen Assert Woman Can Make Good in Artistic Career, and at the Same Time Succeed Equally as Ideal Mate and Guide for Her Children.

NORMA SHEARER
HELEN HAYES
IRENE RICH

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The stage and screen stars who excel in the most important roles of wife and mother are among the most successful of all artists. And this ought to settle once and for all the old controversy of a theatrical career versus matrimony and motherhood. It has become quite commonplace to read about the stork taking a trip to Hollywood and those whom the wise old bird has visited are continuing on their storky ways.
One of the best of all screen players is delightful Norma Shearer. Clothes, jewels, cars, success—all these are as nothing to Norma, compared with the smile of her young babe. She is Mrs. Irving Thalberg, an M-G-M. executive, and he is quite willing to let his wife star in the triple role of screen actress, wife and mother. The new sensation, Marlene Dietrich, is quite emphatic in her statement that marriage and motherhood do not interfere with a career.
She says that she finds it possible to love her husband, her baby and her work and reconcile her three great loves. She is now in Berlin visiting her husband and little daughter, and each year will find lovely Marlene in Germany for a visit of several months.
Irene Rich, who is famous as one of the finest screen actresses, has two daughters at school and is terrifically proud of them, but no more so than they are of their clever, beautiful mother.
Florence Vidor, who is married to Jasha Heifetz, the great violinist, is the mother of a baby and also believes that all three careers are compatible.
Gloria Swanson not only has a child, but adopted another one to keep her own company. In her children she finds her greatest joy. She has carefully shielded them from all publicity and says that she will continue to do so as far as it is in her power. There are no pictures of them to be had.
Nancy Carroll, one of the greatest of the present crop of screen stars, is also a most devoted wife and mother and is extremely proud of her author-husband, Jack Kirkland, and her baby.
Although Mary Pickford has no child of her own, she has acted in the status of a mother to her niece, Mary Gwynne Pickford. She adopted her sister's child some time ago and is rearing her carefully. Dolores Costello, who married Jack Barrymore, is also planning to return to the screen. And so she, too, must find a career compatible with wifehood and motherhood. Friends say that Miss Costello is more beautiful than ever.
On the stage there are many successful mothers. First and foremost comes Ethel Barrymore, who idolizes and is idolized by her three children. To her girl and boys, she is mother, father, pal and chum, and highly successful in each and every role.
Helen Hayes has won new laurels since she became a wife and mother. She, her husband, Charles McArthur, and her baby daughter are as inspiring a trio as one could ever hope to meet. The McArthur baby is as good as she is clever and beautiful, the inordinately proud parents report.
Billie Burke—Mrs. Florence Ziegfeld—has as her inseparable companion her daughter, Patricia, who is now quite a young lady. Billie still looks almost as young as her tall daughter and the two are to be seen laughing and chattering away like a couple of school girls. Patricia is quite dignified and is the idol of Flo Ziegfeld's heart. To watch the three of them at the Ziegfeld home, Berkely Crest, at Hastings on the Hudson, is to realize how happy a family really can be. And Billie is starring in a new show, "The Truth Game," with tremendous success.
Fannie Brice is another star who strenuous stage career and other is a devoted mother. Despite her activities, she watches her brood as if she had nothing else to do. Fannie's devotion as a mother is obvious to any visitor at the Brice apartment.
In the musical world there are two women who have won great success both as singers and mothers. They are Ernestine Schumann-Heink, whose fame as a singer is only equalled by her renown as a devoted wife and mother. Then there is Madame Louise Homer, who has two daughters, Louise and Katherine.

Park Animals in Huddle
During Winter Months
Salt Lake City, Utah, Jan. 3 — (UP)—Nature lovers are missing a great thrill during the winter season.
If they would take a week off and visit Yellowstone National Park they would see great herds of elk, deer and buffalo, that have sought company during a hard winter.
David Madsen, supervisor of game resources in national parks, made a trip through the park and reported one herd of 300 antelope, a herd of 5,000 elk, 800 buffalo and 500 deer.
With the exception of a few drifts it is possible to cross the park by auto from Mammoth Springs to West Yellowstone.
