Bill Rogers says things are so bad now that you can hardly tell a "red" from a tax payer, "cause every body is beefing."

Another week is started. Let's see what we can do individually and collectively to make this a better community in which to live.

The U. S. Chamber of Commerce thinks the up-trend in business has started; at least they say that and we are all hoping they have something real as a basis for the opinion.

Did you pay your taxes? Today is the deadline and those who overlooked it purposely, because they have to or for any other reason will be eventually required to add the ten per cent penalty.

At Capone denies he is dead and if they don't quit teasing him he may do something to prove it to them. The report seemed to make him madder than most any thing that has been said.

You may not favor daylight saving time but so long as it is the adopted time we can save a lot of inconvenience by every one complying with it. Certainly the old town clock ought to be in tune.

A canning factory wishes to locate here and we know of no industry that would be a greater asset. It provides employment for a number and a summer cash crop for the farmers. We are sure there will be no difficulty in securing plenty of acreage in this locality.

Construction work on the new federal building here started this morning and every one is hoping it will be rushed right along. If a bunch of local men could be added to the force however, we are sure it would speed things up and please every one here more.

All set for the annual cleanup of the city. The trucks start tomorrow morning, bright and early, and you are supposed to have the old cans and rubbish which has gathered during the winter, all ready for them. The more you help, the better the job.

There is quite a bit of real estate dealing in progress just now and a number of very good sales have been reported the past few days. It's a splendid time to buy property, to remodel or to build and the more of that kind of business transacted, the better for every one.

There is no doubt that Second street ought to be resurfaced and we know that every body will appreciate it if the work can be done this year. It will provide labor, furnish a decent pavement for motorists and pedestrians and since it has to be done, there just couldn't be a better time. County officials are trying to meet the demands.

Harl "Spot" Hollingsworth will join the state police force tomorrow and in whatever capacity he is placed, will prove efficient. He has had fifteen years experience in that line of work, as an Oregon ranger, marshal at Geneva and sheriff of this county and knows the duties, has the courage and is courteous. He should make good.

The Adams Post of the American Legion has established a new record, membership now exceeding three hundred. The local post is recognized as one of the liveliest organizations in the middle west and its continual growth is a mark of credit. The boys are always anxious to assist in matters of general interest and have a number of successes to their short history.

Judge McNabb has ordered a clean-up of vice and liquor activities in Fort Wayne and declares that unless the police follow his orders immediately he will call a special grand jury to see what's going on and why and the way the judge says it we have an idea it will soon not be so easy to get a quart of the old stuff that makes the eyes grow glassy.

Bryan Untiedt, the lad who gave his own coat that other children caught in the big snow storm in Colorado a few weeks ago, might live, has concluded the happiest occasion of his life and no difference what his future may be we doubt if he will ever have a greater thrill than his visit with President Hoover and family. He has been well entertained every minute and seems to have made good with all the folks he has met in Washington.

The boys paraded Saturday. It was their day, closing the big week which is dedicated each year to them. It's a great movement for what we do for the boys we are doing for the men of tomorrow and how soon it does roll around. Seems like only a half dozen years since we were playing rounders, joining parades and doing the things these youngsters are and here we are with a flock of grandchildren, bald and ready for a cane. Teach the lads to prepare for the battle to make this the best community in a better world.

HOLLYWOOD, April 30.—

While music no longer is openly employed to work upon the emotions in screen dramas, it is creeping back in the form of underscoring.

Correctly used, this music is heard by audiences only through their subconscious minds. It gives pulse and character to the drama and goes on simultaneously with the dialogue.

Dr. William Axt, former musical director at the Capitol theatre in New York, and Oscar Radin are developing this new art at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"Music in underscoring," explains Dr. Axt, "has to be unobtrusive—just something to color the dialogue. If an audience has to listen for it, we have failed. On the other hand, if it distracts their attention from the dialogue, also we have failed."

Great care has to be used in the choice of instruments. Wood winds, says Dr. Axt, blot dialogue. The music of one flute, for instance, would be fatal. Muted string sections over brasses are the best form of instrumentation for the new type of underscoring.

Ramon Novarro's new picture, "Daybreak," has a dozen motifs, ranging from Brahms to folk songs. "The Secret Six," a gang picture, has music from several Wagnerian operas in its underlying score. In the future, Dr. Axt predicts, pictures may be underscored almost in their entirety.

OLD HABITS PERSIST.

Charlie Murray tells one about the group of vaudeville actors who became so discouraged they decided on desperate measures.

The next morning they met on the banks of the Hudson River. Two hours later a policeman, patrolling his beat, discovered them standing on the brink.

"What are you guys doing?" he asked.

"We're going to drown ourselves," they said.

"Well, why don't you?" he scoffed.

"We can't," replied the leader. "Nobody will go on first."

GIVING THE DOG HIS DUE.
One of Hollywood's dog actors has an automobile registered in his name. He is "Cameo," a grizzled fox-terrier which played in the first version of "Penrod and Sam" nine years ago, and which has been selected to re-create the role in the new First National talkie of this Booth Tarkington story. Ben Alexander, now a juvenile, was Penrod in the old film. Leon Janney takes the part in the new one. Director William Beaudine remembered "Cameo" from the silent picture and got him for the talkie. The dog is owned by Hap Ward and the family automobile is registered to Cameo Ward.

Dorothy Jordan.

PENNY WISE.

Not so long ago, Fox released Dorothy Jordan because they didn't think she was worth $75 a week.

Now they are borrowing her from M.G.M. for many times that amount to play the lead in a talkie version of Maude Fulton's old melodrama, "The Brat."

Dorothy also made "Young Sinners" for Fox. She has been in great demand since her fine performance as the wait in "Min and Bill."

Frankie Albertson plays the juvenile lead in "The Brat" and James Kirkwood will have a prominent part.

LATEST GOSSIP.

What a shock! The noise of heavy timbers buckling is reproduced for the talkies by cracking peanut shells. For the first time in his life, Will Rogers owns a full dress suit, a cutaway coat and striped trousers. His contract calls for him to furnish "all modern wardrobe" and the story called for them in "Young as you feel." The whole lot are hanging up on nails in the Rogers dressing room at Fox.

A Paramount convention story reads, "Adolph Zukor started his career with $40." Hope I finish mine with that. . . . Zion Myers and Jules White, originators of M. G. M.'s all-barkie comedies, will use four of their dog actors in Buster Keaton's new picture, "Sidewalks of N. Y. York."

Alberta Vaughn, well-remembered from the silent days, will play opposite Hoot Gibson in his second Western for M. H. Hoffman, Jr., and Allied pictures. . . . Speaking of Westerns, a horse named "Ghost" has traveled 50,000 miles to locations in the last two years. He has been used by Gary Cooper, Ken Maynard, Jack Holt and others stars.

Lessons In English

Words often misused: Do not say "Let me try and see if I can do it." Say "Let me try to see whether I can do it."

Often mispronounced: Donkey. Pronounce don-ki, the o as in "on" not as in "done."

Often misspelled: Rye (a grain) Wry (turned to one side.)

Synonyms: Serious, earnest, solemn, sedate.

Word study: "Use a word three times and it is yours." Let us increase our vocabulary by mastering one word each day. Today's word: Infrangible; not capable of being broken or separated into parts. "They thought that atoms were infrangible."

GRECIAN TEMPLE USED AS MODEL FOR MEMORIAL

Georgian Marble Used In Construction of Harding Tomb

By Ralph Teatsorth, UP. Staff Correspondent.

Marion, O., May 3.—(U.P.)—The memorial to President Warren G. Harding, which will be dedicated by President Hoover on June 16, stands at the southern edge of the city and is of Grecian architecture. The memorial is of Georgia marble and is located in the center of a 10-acre tract along the Marion-Columbus highway, adjoining McKinley Park. It is circular, with 48 marble columns forming the circle. The columns represent the 48 states.

Inside, the circle is an open court, surrounded by a marble walk. Within this court are two concrete sarcophagi containing the bodies of President and Mrs. Harding. The sarcophagi rest in a deep vault at the center of a grass-covered plot. Each grave is covered by a massive granite slab.

Modelled After Old Temple
Henry Hornbostel and Eric Wood, Pittsburgh architects who submitted the design for the memorial, patterned it after the circular temple of ancient Greece. From the ruins of this temple, the designers obtained the basic plan for the memorial.

Roman architecture also contributed to the plan of the memorial. The Romans built circular buildings and huge stone tombs for their emperors. The circular form of the monument presents a more impressive appearance than the rectangular because it has no definite direction on the exterior and no climax on the interior.

The Harding tomb also differs from others in that it has no doorway. It has much of the appearance of a garden crypt. The beauty of the interior colonnade has been enhanced by the planting of trees and other vegetation. The designers of the memorial strove to avoid the oppressive or forbidding impression given by most monuments of its kind.

Form of Latin Cross
The form of the Latin cross was used in the landscaping plan, the memorial being placed at the intersection of the arms of the cross. The main approach to the tomb was placed on the basis of the longer arm of the cross. Trees have been planted along the sides of the outlined cross.

A general boulevard system is a part of the memorial plan, connecting the memorial grounds with McKinley Park, owned by the city. The boulevard running east and west is three-quarters of a mile in length.

Construction work on the Harding memorial was begun in 1925. The cornerstone was laid in 1926 and the task was actually finished in 1929. The landscaping was not completed until 1930.

The cost of the memorial was between $750,000 and $800,000. Of this amount, $550,000 was spent on the monument and approximately $25,000 on the grounds and landscaping.

300,000 Locomotives Used
Philadelphia, May 3.—(U.P.)—A fleet of nearly 300,000 locomotives, passenger, freight and work cars were required for the operation of the Pennsylvania railroad system in 1930, officials of the company declared.

Five-Legged Calf Born
