 sounded a warning to railroads against rate increases. He touched upon the growing competition offered railroads by motor and water freight lines. "The public will patronize the transportation system that gives the best service at the lowest cost," Frederick commented, "and it would be wise for railroads to study carefully the advantages of all other forms of transportation and inaugurate such changes as will give them an opportunity to compete in service, efficiency and cost."

the Democrats have. Second, he is opposed to the Smoot-Hawley tariff, and I am very much against it, too. Third, the Republicans are more afraid of Governor Roosevelt than of any other possible nominee, and I don't want to help the Republicans defeat him for the nomination. And then, also, Governor Roosevelt is an old friend of mine—a friend I have known for 20-odd years, and I am a friend of members of his family.

"My heart probably will not permit me to take a very active part in the fight to win him the nomination, but I certainly will do everything possible for him."

Storm Brewing Over Ban 'On Professor and Nurse

Refusal of Citizenship Papers to Pair Who Will Not Bear Arms in Time of War to Precipitate Battle in Congress on Laws

PROF. DOUGLAS MACKINTOSH and MISS MARIE AVERILL

Refused citizenship by the United States Supreme Court by the close vote of 5 to 4, after the Federal Court of Appeals had granted them full citizen privileges in overruling two lower courts, Professor Douglas Clyde Mackintosh, of Yale University, and Miss Marie Averill Bland, New York nurse, Canadians, are the center of a controversy which Congress and President Hoover probably will be called upon to settle. While both Professor Mackintosh and Nurse Bland served during the World War, it was due to their disinclination to bear arms for the United States in the event of war that forced the highest U. S. tribunal to bar them as citizens. The educator said he would fight for America if the cause was just, while the nurse was definitely opposed to shouldering arms because of religious scruples. The latest victims of the alien naturalization law are shown above with Mrs. Rosika Schwimmer, another prominent person denied citizenship because of her conscientious objections to war.

New York, June 4.—Always a mooted subject jammed full of dynamite with only the torch of public opinion ready to set it off, the question of granting or refusing citizenship to those aliens who will not swear to bear arms for the United States flares anew with the refusal of the Supreme court to naturalize two Canadians who saw service during the World War.

The latest victims of the laws governing the admittance of aliens to citizenship are Professor Douglas Clyde Mackintosh, of Yale University, who served as a chaplain during the World War, and Miss Marie Averill Bland, a New York nurse, who administered to American troops at Brest in the wake of the world struggle.

Now congress, which falls heir to most of the squabbles of the land, will have to decide whether Professor Mackintosh and Miss Bland, together with other aliens who have definitely or partially refused to swear armed allegiance to the U. S. A., notably among them Mrs. Rosika Schwimmer, conscientious objector to war, are to be deported or permitted to remain.

Spokesmen for the Friends Church, of which President Hoover is a member, and many bishops of the Episcopal church, who filed briefs upholding the professor's and nurse's stand declining to bear arms, are making it plain that the fight to have the two Canadians naturalized will be carried to congress.

Since President Hoover is a member of a church whose tenets strongly abhor war, it is probable that the chief executive will be brought into the case at every opportunity. Pressure from all sides is generally forecast for not only the President, but every member of congress, that the laws controlling naturalization of aliens be either strengthened or loosened to permit greater freedom of action in admitting certain aliens.

Professor Mackintosh and Nurse Bland have already once experi-

GOVERNORS ON PRESIDENTIAL BATTLE FRONT

strategic roles with regard to national policies. Furthermore, a gallery of newspaper correspondents is in constant attendance to give national prominence to senatorial activities.

Then there is the modern conception that a senator ranks higher in the scale than a governor. All governors want to be senators but no senator is seen going back to be governor of his state. When Senator Norris, Repn., Neb., once talked about quitting the senate to run for governor, it was a political sensation.

With the growth of the nation and the welding of the units in the federal system, the view of the senate as practically a council of ambassadors of the sovereign states disappeared so that the governor, once the more dominant figure, has been assigned now to the second table. Therefore unless a governor has a striking and exceptionally forceful personality or is governor of New York, which makes him ex-officio a presidential possibility, he has hard going competing with a senator standing on the gigantic national sounding board at Washington.

Yet statistics show that after the early booms run their course, senators for one reason or another, fall behind. The chances favor the governors. Of twenty-four men nominated for the presidency by major parties since the Civil war, plus the candidacy of the elder Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin in 1924, exactly half were governors or former governors. Five were senators, including La Follette, who became a national figure first as governor of Wisconsin. Blaine, Benjamin Harrison, and Harding were senators before they were nominated for president. Garfield was elected to be senate before he took his seat, he was nominated for president and resigned.
