Point of Etiquette

Discussion has been carried on, in many quarters, as to whether it is permissible, in polite or miscellaneous company, to scoop blackberry juice from the deplated plate with a spoon; or whether one may even, as the company becomes more intimate, lap the last puddle with the tip of the tongue, as an appreciative cat might do. There has been much discussion of this, but no standardization method has resulted. —Boston Herald.

Old Name Retained

There is a district on the west coast of Africa still known today as Songhay. The name is the remnant of a great negro empire that once flourished in Northwest Africa, near the Sahara desert. This empire is thought to have had universities and astronomical observatories, wealth and pageantry. Now it is only a name. But the name has been carried overseas to the South African bush and persists there long after its origin has been forgotten. —New York Herald Tribune.

"Greenhorn"

The word "greenhorn" is of rural English origin and means an ox with the horns just making their appearance, hence a young ox unused to the ways of the plow, and metaphorically, a young man not yet settled to his calling and place in the world.

Civil War Roster

In State Dwindles

Indianapolis, Jan. 8.—(UP)—Indiana's waning line of blue-veterans of the Civil war—lost more than one-third of its membership by death in 1931, according to a survey compiled by the United Press. Although these figures are not official, they were gathered from all available sources and considered authoritative.

Records of the Grand Army of the Republic showed that there were 611 veterans in Indiana at the beginning of 1931. Before the year was over, taps were sounded for 232, leaving only about 375 Civil war veterans in the state.

Using reliable experience statistics as a basis of judgment, half of the remaining old soldiers will die in 1932. Probably the next decade will see the death of the last Hoosier veteran.

Extreme weather took the heaviest toll, monthly death records reveal. Twenty-four veterans died in January and 31 in March. Twenty-two died in the hot month of July and 20 in August. December saw the death of 19. September, with eight fatalities, recorded the last month of deaths.

One of the oldest and one of the youngest veterans in the state died during the year. Daniel Auer, Fort Wayne was 99 when he died March
